China's Sad New Year.
All for the Best, Perhaps.
Movie Success Secrets.
Two Kinds of Women.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Feb. 6.

IN SAN FRANCISCO, on the north, and Los Angeles on the south, Chinese yesterday began quietly and mournfully their nine-day celebration of China's new year.

No firecrackers popping, horns blowing, cymbals clashing, to celebrate the day, and frighten evil spirits. Instead, mournful reading of war bulletins, denunciation of Japan by young Chinese. An old Chinese merchant in Los Angeles says:

"Things are very bad. Our women and children weep all day."

HARBIN HAS BEEN taken by the Japanese. Floyd Gibbons reports, as a matter of fact, the murder, in cold blood, of civilian Chinese, captured by Japanese soldiers:

"The mystery of Chinese prisoners taken by the Japanese has been cleared up in a horrible manner by the finding of the terribly bayonetted, nude bodies of 13 Chinese in a Japanese flour mill, evacuated Thursday by Japanese sailors and civilian guards. Where are the bodies of other prisoners taken by the Japanese during the past week?"

REMEMBERING THE BIG war, with its hideous false stories of children mutilated by German soldiers, etc., allowance will be made for war hysteria and false rumors.

Perhaps the Chinese, celebrating their new year in sorrow, can find comfort in looking ahead. Many countries have been helped by invasion. It was a good thing for Gaul, now France, that Caesar went there, good for Britain that William the Conqueror took possession, good for America that the whites came in, good for Texas, California, etc., that they became part of the United States, instead of remaining Mexican.

THE FOUR to five hundred million Chinese will absorb, in time, the sixty or seventy million Japanese, as England absorbed William's Normans, as modern New York absorbed the Dutch ancients, as the Italian peninsula has absorbed, and made Italian, the hordes of Germanic invaders, the "longbeards" that gave their name to Lombardy, and all the other barbarians.

JAPAN IS a business nation, understanding organization and modern methods. She will organize industry and agriculture in Manchuria, suppress banditry, permit the natives to live and work in peace, and permit them to buy goods from other countries.

The Chinese are industrious, honest, able. The coming of foreigners will not mean that their country will be taken from them. Four or five hundred million human beings cannot be crowded out.

Japan will find IN ASIA the room that she needs for expansion.

In any case, it is not OUR business.

YOUNG PEOPLE with their minds and ambitions turned toward this coast, and the Hollywood movies, are warned not to come now, unless they can bring money enough to take care of them, while they seek an opening for their talent.

Alfred Santell, one of the ablest moving picture directors, which means that he knows how to BRING OUT and use talent, names three things that make moving picture success.

They are, in the order of importance:

First, APPEAL, the power to interest the public by force of personality. The vulgar, outworn "sex appeal," is not meant. Nor is mere physical beauty meant.

Second, ABILITY, the power to express emotion, to act.

Third, APTITUDE, power to learn, to innate adaptability to the work in hand, to co-operate, understand, express.

Says Mr. Santell:

"Women, for stage or screen, are divided in two classes. First, the type that men want to own—Garbo, Dietrich. Second, the women that men want to protect—Mary Pickford, Janet Gaynor. Between float II sorts, less definite, less successful."

CONGRESSMAN M'FADDEN, Republican, of Pennsylvania, says the Carnegie Foundation is an institution devoted to propaganda, using millions given by Carnegie to push this nation into the League of Nations.

Carnegie would not want his money spent that way. He came here from Scotland, built up a great industry, and never doubted the ability of this nation to manage its own affairs. Anyone using his money as charged by Congressman McFadden betrays Carnegie's trust.

SOME AMERICANS who have felt that this nation's property belongs to him who has the money to buy it, will be glad of a decision rendered by the San Francisco United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Reversing a lower court in Los Angeles, the San Francisco Judges decide that the Pan-American Petroleum Corporation must return to the United States government $12,000,000 in oil land leases, because the leases, in the language of the Federal Court, "were tainted by the same common fraud" involved in the Fall bribery case.

The corporation must also account to the government for millions of profit from oil and gas production in the 600 acres involved. Justice William H. Sawtelle, formerly of Arizona, wrote the decision.

ALLEN DEATH NOT ASKED BY STATE

Lawyers Argue for Society Youth Behind Closed Doors After Previous Day's Jeers

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Eddie Allen, young society man, charged with murdering Francis A. Donaldson III, may know tonight what fate has in store for him.

When the sixth day of the trial opened today counsel for the defense began the final pleas for the young defendant.

Allen came into court apparently much refreshed after his severe ordeal on the witness stand yesterday, when he told his dramatic story that he did not mean to kill Donaldson, but only to scare him.

Following defense counsel's plea for acquittal, District Attorney Stewart Nase summed up for the Commonwealth. He did not ask for the death penalty.

COURTROOM LOCKED

The court today took measures to prevent hisses and handclapping that marked the appearance of the defendant on the stand. There were hisses when District Attorney Nase asked certain questions of Allen yesterday, and some of the defendant's replies brought forth demonstrations of approval through handclapping.

When former State Senator Fletcher W. Stites rose to make the first of the final pleas for the defendant, he asked the court that no one be allowed to enter the room while he was speaking, and Judge Harold G. Knight ordered the doors locked.

Before Stites began his address, District Attorney Nase sought to offer rebuttal testimony to show that Donaldson had the reputation of being a peaceful, law-abiding citizen, to combat statements of defense counsel. Judge Knight would not permit the commonwealth to introduce rebuttal testimony on the speech of an attorney.

Rose Allen, sister of the defendant, was not present when the proceedings started and did not hear the opening speech of the day in the tragedy in which she played such a prominent part. She appeared later. Horace Allen, father of the defendant, was present.

PICTURES KILLING

Stites pictured the peaceful scene in the Allen apartment at the fashionable Green Hill Farms Hotel where Allen lay reading on a davenport with his father nearby when Donaldson and his friend Albert Gallatin H. Lucas, entered the room unannounced. He described Allen's request for them to leave, the refusal to go, the quarrel, the violent blows struck, Allen's departure and return with a gun, and the shooting.

Stites condemned the attitude of Lucas, who, he said, went to the Allen apartment with Donaldson supposedly to bring about peace between young Allen and his sister.

Stites' reference to Lucas' alleged moral responsibility for the death of his friend startled Lucas who was sitting in the courtroom.

JAPANESE ATTACKERS DRIVE OUT CHURCH OFFICIALS; PLANES BATTER SHANGHAI

SHANGHAI, Feb. 6.—With American and British land and sea forces doubled in Shanghai, the Japanese suddenly shifted the center of pressure today from the Chinese city on the north border of the International Settlement to the triangular area nine miles north formed by the confluence of the Whangpoo and Yangtze rivers.

Under the cover of naval guns and preceded constantly by watchful air bombers, strong contingents of Japanese regular army troops, the first of these to participate in this conflict, are pushing inland in a southeasterly direction from landing points on the south bank of the Yangtze between the Chinese villages of Paoshan and Luiho.

VILLAGES WRECKED

Both of these villages have been reduced to dust, splinters, ashes and corpses by yesterday's bombardment.

The landing point of the Japanese troops on the Yangtze is about 15 miles north and slightly east of Shanghai. The fire of heavy guns can be heard from that direction at present.

The map would indicate the Japanese are pushing in a southwesterly direction down the Shanghai-Tai Tsang motor road which passes through the ruins of the Chinese city on the north boundary of the International Concession.

The British and American naval and land forces here are almost in complete ignorance of events outside their zones, headquarters being unequipped with native intelligence agents.

The Japanese military authorities keep fully informed night and day by air observation and radio communication between their distant land and sea forces.

The flagship Houston is equipped with four speedy observation planes, but Admiral Taylor has been prevented from using these for all essential observation, because of the Chinese International conventions prohibiting foreign planes from flying over Chinese territory. Japanese fliers ignore these conventions.

RAIL LINK MENACED

The Japanese line of advance is now to the westward and rear of Woosung, aimed to cut the Chinese army's rail communications with Nanking, westward of Shanghai.

Servants Believed Killed In Raid On Post

FLOUT WARNING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.) — The explosion from Chinese anti-aircraft guns in the Marine regimental area at Shanghai was reported today to the Navy Department.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 6.—(AP.) — Two American Mission houses in Shanghai were attacked this afternoon while a fleet of airplane bombers roared overhead, battering for the second time today the flattened sector of Chapei.

Japanese bluejackets entered and ransacked the American Presbyterian mission and press on North Szechuen road, well within the area occupied by the Japanese. They forced their way into the building in spite of an official notice of the American Consul nailed on the entrance to the property.

OFFICIALS DRIVEN OUT

The American Southern Methodist Episcopal Mission in Hongkew, which last week was ransacked by the bluejackets, was subjected to a shelling from the light artillery guns in Chapei during the afternoon, and mission officials in the building attempting to appraise last week's damage were forced to retire under the shellfire.

It is not known whether the shells came from Japanese or Chinese guns.

The Presbyterian mission forcibly entered today is owned by the Presbyterian mission headquarters in New York. It has been engaged in the printing and publishing business here for 60 years. No one knew why the bluejackets ransacked it unless they were seeking anti-Japanese literature, quantities of which have flooded the district. The owners protested to the United States Consulate.

SERVANTS' FATE IN DOUBT

When the Methodist Mission was ransacked last week the Japanese terrorized the Chinese servants. Officials said that there was no evidence of servants within the property today. Two Americans said when they were entering the property a few days ago they saw a Japanese Marine repeatedly bayoneting a helpless Chinese man, plunging the bayonet into him until all movement in his body ceased.

Americans expressed the belief today that the bluejackets had taken away all the servants, whose fate may have been the same as that of the man they saw.

Two Chinese fliers ventured over the metropolitan area today, but soon disappeared to the westward, probably toward their base, the location of which was not known here.

PHILA. POLICE HUNT FOR GIRL

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Failure to find any trace of an 8-year-old child missing from her home since Wednesday, led to an order today for police to make a house-to-house canvass of every section of the neighborhood in which the little girl lived with her widowed mother.

The child, Dorothy Lutz, it is feared, met with foul play at the hands of a maniac.

Armed with picks and shovels, police today dug about the cellar of a vacant house near where the child lived. Prior to that they had sifted a freshly turned pile of earth in the cellar of the Lutz home.

Mrs. Florence Lutz, the child's mother, was near collapse.

Daniel Weller, Oil Head, Kills Self

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Daniel Weller, 60, who retired on January 1 as president of the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, committed suicide today by shooting himself in the head in the basement of his brother's home. Weller was born in Oil City, Pa., and lived for several years in Cleveland before making his permanent home in Baton Rouge.

DALTON HEADS SHEET, TUBE

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—H. G. Dalton, of Cleveland, has been elected chairman of the board of directors of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, it was announced today. He succeeds James A. Campbell, 77-year-old executive, who resigned to become chairman emeritus.

Dalton, a partner in Pickands, Mather & Co., ore producing and shipping firm, of Cleveland, recently resigned as a director of Bethlehem Steel Corporation. His dual position as director of both Bethlehem and Sheet and Tube was given prominence during Cyrus S. Eaton's successful fight against a proposed merger of the two companies. Dalton was active in the preliminary merger negotiations. He has been first vice president of Sheet and Tube for many years.

DREYFUSS BODY ARRIVES

Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh baseball team, came home today for the last time.

His body arrived on a special car shortly after 8 a. m. and was taken from the East Liberty Pennsylvania Railroad Station to his family residence in the Schenley Apartments. He died in New York yesterday.

Dreyfuss, who was 66, had directed the Pittsburgh club since 1900 and was one of baseball's outstanding figures.

On the funeral train were his widow, his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Benswanger, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Samuel Dreyfuss, widow of his only son who died February 22 of last year.

Only a small group of his close friends, 40 or 50 in number, and including George Gibson, new manager of the team, and Sam Watters, its secretary, met the train.

Fifty-nine friends, many of them prominent in the sports world, have been named honorary pallbearers.

Funeral services will be held in the Rodef Shalom Temple at 3 p. m. tomorrow, followed by burial in West View Cemeter.

Friends will be admitted to the Temple at 1:30, or may call at the Dreyfuss home tonight.

Two Men Killed In Rubber Blast

MARYSVILLE, Mich., Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Two men died early today and another is expected to succumb from burns suffered in an explosion at the St. Clair Rubber Co. plant.

U. S. DESTROYER IN CRASH

SHANGHAI, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—A hole was torn in the bow of the United States destroyer Whipple today as it crashed with the British steamer Rosalie Moller in the Whangpoo River two miles from Shanghai.

The American destroyer was badly damaged, although the British vessel escaped with less serious consequences.

The Whipple was circling when the collision occurred. Both ships were laid up for repairs.

Connellsville Man On Disabled Ship

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 6.—Earnest Ritcher, son of Mrs. Mary Ritcher, of Connellsville, was aboard the destroyer Whipple when it crashed with the British steamer Rosalie in the Lower Whangpoo River, near Shanghai, early today. He has been stationed on the Whipple for several weeks.

BULLETINS

SHANGHAI, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—At 5:30 tonight, as it was nearly dark, the Japanese bombardment was increasing in volume. There was much machine-gunning, and fires were starting afresh in the Chinese sections of the city.

TOKIO, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Differences of opinion within the Japanese cabinet today delayed issuance of the government's statement on mobilization of Japanese army units in connection with the struggle in China. The statement may not be given out before Monday.

NANKING, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The German and Italian diplomatic representatives in China notified the Chinese government today that their respective governments have joined the United States and Great Britain in the proposals for a solution of the Japanese crisis, it was stated at the foreign office today.

Beechview Stores Renew Price-Cutting War

The chain store price cutting war in Beechview, which started two weeks ago, has been renewed.

Three of the Beechview avenue stores are next door to each other, and the fourth store is separated by another building.

Instead of the conservative small price tags, huge bright colored signs adorn the windows today.

The biggest slash is on pork loin. Originally priced at 14 cents a pound, it opened this morning at 8 cents and immediately dropped to 6 cents. All steaks — tenderloin, porterhouse, sirloin and round, which sold from 15 to 19 cents, are now sold at 13 cents. Sugar which sold for $1.25 in 25-pound sacks, is now sacrificed at $1.09.

One store announced shortly before noon that it will compete with the others, but will drop out of the "war" when the merchandise reaches cost.

The South Hills populace are waiting for the night to do their shopping, as meats were sold for a cent a pound at the close of the initial price "battle."

3 Pittsburgh Missionaries In China War Zone

Three Presbyterian missionaries from Pittsburgh today were in the Shanghai section which was swept by shell fire, it was learned here.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton Espey, associated with the South Gate Mission, just outside the Shanghai wall, and Miss Loretta Crawford, connected with the Soochow School, near Shanghai, were in the fighting zone, friends said.

No word has been received from the missionaries, according to friends, who declared they believed them to be safe.

the Chaumont's dock across half of the Japanese defense zone and up the Nanking road to their bullets. Japanese heavy bombing planes with hundreds of pounds of explosives suspended from the lower wings sailed majestically overhead.

Chinese anti-aircraft guns popped away at them and shells fell in the International City.

FALLING PLANE MENACE

Chinese anti-aircraft shells are not provided with time fuses and explode only when they land and whenever they land, that is, if they are not duds, as half of them are.

It must not be forgotten, however, that one of these same shells ripped one Japanese bomber on the wing yesterday and brought it down with the remainder of its bombs.

Foreign residents don't like it. Think what will happen if the Chinese wing another Japanese bomber and bring it and its heavy body down in Shanghai's crowded business section.

Foreigners have joined the Chinese in a protest against the Japanese military planes flying over the International City.

Japanese Guns Make Chapei City of Dead

(Copyright 1932, by the Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The riddled Chapei sector of Shanghai, once the home of 200,000 persons, today was a city of dead.

[illegible] eight consecutive days and [illegible] Japanese airplanes and big [illegible] poured shells and [illegible] the congested area [illegible] which time is not like[illegible]

[illegible] inhabitants have suffered [illegible] active Chinese participation in the sector's defense, thousands of persons, many of whom scarcely knew what it was all about, have lost their homes and many have been killed by fire and bursting shells.

STATION RUINED

The Shanghai-Nanking railway station is a mass of ruins, wrecked by bombs and fire. The rails themselves have been twisted and wrenched into all manner of shapes. Likewise, the huge plant of the Commercial Press, called the world's largest printing plant, has been flattened. For 30 years it printed most of the books, in many languages, which have been read throughout China.

Within the sector, over a wide range of wrecked buildings and scattered debris not a human being could be seen today. The sound of a single rifle shot reverberated through the empty streets, echoing and re-echoing until followed by another.

Although this sepulchral stillness made it seem a city of the dead, there were few dead to be seen. Squads of Japanese volunteers have performed their "cleaning-up" duties well. What has happened to the bodies could not be learned.

Only in the alleyways or close to the front line barricades could one see any bodies.

RESTORATION BIG TASK

Within this vast junkheap, which was once a thriving city, there is, or was, much Japanese property. This has gone the way of the rest, into the limbo of destroyed things. The Chinese, however, were the principal sufferers and when the fighting ends it will be a long time before the sector can be restored.

Property in the International Settlement also suffered devastating effects from the Japanese fire. Along the southern reaches of the Szechuen road, where many foreigners lived and traded, the damage is great.

Along the settlement borders adjacent to Chapei, many business houses have fallen before the bombs and others have been burned, often by incendiarism, it has been charged.

WINDOWS SMASHED

Shop windows have been smashed by rifle butts. Business thereabouts is dead and it will be a long time before it recovers, even if the hostilities should cease today.

Chapei, however, is crushed. It is now a waste land. To escape from it into the Settlement, where people live without rifles and bayonets, and where cleanliness still prevails, is like stepping from one world into another.

PEACE EFFORTS CHECKMATED

By ROBERT C. MONTEE
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—In strange contrast to the sledge-hammer blows which the Japanese military was making today upon the Chinese defense forces at Shanghai, diplomacy the world over appeared to have taken a day off to cogitate the situation.

It was definitely ascertained from responsible administration quarters here that the neutral powers, including the United States, have been unable to formulate a practical plan for re-establishing peace in the Orient, since the Japanese bluntly rejected the latest peace overtures put forward by the United States, Britain, France and Italy.

The probability loomed that large Japanese forces converging upon Shanghai will capture the city before the neutral powers can agree upon a diplomatic plan for "peace negotiations," which will then no longer be necessary.

Rich Chicago Women Aid Jailed Barmaid

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Wealthy members of Chicago's exclusive North Shore social set today initiated steps to free a 26-year-old mother who was sentenced to six months imprisonment for working as a barmaid in a speakeasy.

The young woman, Mrs. Helen Yost, was sentenced after she told a federal court she took the $15 a week barmaid's job to support her 5-year-old son and an invalid mother. A former University of Wisconsin co-ed, the girl said she was unable to find work anywhere else.

Senate Again Holds Farm Board Names

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—For the sixth time the Senate yesterday deferred consideration of the nominations of Frank Evans, William F. Schilling and Sam H. Thompson as members of the Farm Board. They are expected to come up again next week.

The postponement has been made on behalf of Senator Norbeck, who has been busy with banking legislation and who plans to protest the present farm relief policy when the nominations are considered.

In his third trial, C. M. Lowell, former police chief of Forest Hills, was acquitted by a jury in Criminal Court, late yesterday on a charge of extortion in that he was alleged to have received $150 from Peter Kandra, of Braddock, to settle an automobile violation case. Twice before Lowell had been found guilty but had been granted a new trial each time.

Mate Heaves Bird, Gilded Cage at Wife

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 6.—(INS.)—"She's only a bird in a gilded cage," said a popular song of years ago.

OUST ACCUSED POLICEMAN

The dismissal of Traffic Officer Thomas Baugh, of McKeesport, was ordered at an open hearing in City Hall yesterday. Baugh, suspended October 1 by Chief of Police John J. Whalen, was accused of taking money from a register of a Fifth avenue restaurant. Vasilious Geannikis, a waiter, said the officer "brushed" him aside, placed his hand on a gun, went behind the counter and took a handful of money.

Pete Phillips, the restaurant owner, in the same statement, said on checking up the register he discovered a shortage of $22. Phillips said the officer returned $10.

The accused officer, off duty at the time, produced witnesses that the waiter lent him $10 from the register. Baugh testified he needed the money very badly, as he was on his way to Greensburg to get married.

LAWYER FIGHTS COST VERDICT

Attorneys today are discussing the action of a jury in Criminal Court which placed the costs of a suit on the attorney who was said to have caused the action to be brought.

Attorney J. I. Simon, of the Plaza Building, who was directed in the verdict to pay the costs, is expected to make a motion before the court to have the verdict set aside.

In a statement, Attorney Simon challeneged his critics to lay the case before a Bar Association committee for investigation and judgment as to ethics.

The case was that of Sophia Spokoff, 2614 California avenue, who had made two informations charging perjury against Wasil Nowak, a carpenter, of 1925 Beaver avenue. The verdict read:

"Not guilty. Costs to be paid by Attorney J. I. Simon, the real prosecutor."

JAPAN READY TO QUIT LEAGUE

Tokio Risks Membership To Prevent Application Of Covenant in Crisis

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service.

TOKIO, Feb. 6.—The foreign office today decided to risk Japan's membership in the League of Nations in an effort to prevent the League Council, sitting at Geneva, from applying Article XV of the league covenant to Japan's controversy with China.

Naotake Sato, Japan's representative at the council, was instructed to go to the utmost limits to prevent application of the article which provides that members of the council submit their disputes to arbitration by the council and empowers the council to investigate them.

Sato was instructed to do this even at the risk of Japan's withdrawal from the league, hinting that should the council submit to China's insistence that something be done under Article XV, Japan would quit the league.

Borah Denounces World Police Plan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A sharp denunciation by Chairman Borah of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee appeared to Washington today to have barred any chance of France's proposal for an international police force being accepted.

As far as the United States goes—any action by it must be ratified in the Senate—Borah usually speaks with the voice of authority. And little chance was conceded for an argument set-up under the League of Nations while the United States maintains Army and Navy intact. Borah said:

"An international police force to guarantee the security of the world is a perfectly logical product of the Versailles and other peace treaties."

U. S. WINS FALL OIL LEASE BACK

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—More than $12,000,000 worth of oil leases in the Elk Hills reserve of California were won back by the federal government yesterday by a court decision that again placed the brand of fraud on naval oil leasing transactions between Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny.

Judge William E. Sawtelle, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, ruled against the Pan-American Petroleum Company in its fight to retain the leases.

The court held illegal the award of the leases to the Doheny concern by Fall, former secretary of the Interior, who now is serving a prison term on a conviction of accepting a bribe from the oil magnate. A decision of United States District Judge Frank H. Corcross on November 19, 1930, in favor of the company was reversed.

Predicts Victory for Japanese, Seizure Of Territory

Japan will win its fight with China and take what territory it desires, in the opinion of Smedley D. Butler, retired major general of United States Marines, who passed through Pittsburgh last night on his way to address a meeting in Scottish Rite Cathedral, New Castle.

If the United States does not want war, great care should be exercised by this nation on its movements in the Far East, Gen. Butler warned. Asked if he thought the United States would become involved in war, he said:

"I don't know. You know how these things are. You don't want war. I don't want war. But if we read a bulletin that 125 American women and children had been killed we would fight in a minute."

URGES PROTECTION

Asked if he would go to China in case of war, he replied:

"I will go wherever I am sent."

And he added that at all costs, American citizens in China should be protected.

Will the Japanese take Shanghai, he was asked.

"I think so. The Chinese generals will start to sell out pretty soon. About $50,000 apiece will take care of them. The Chinese army is poorly organized. They need one good leader. Individually, the Chinese are splendid fighters."

HOW CHINESE WIN

Would he predict how the fight would end? Gen. Butler's eyes sparkled and a smile lit up the fighting face of the veteran Marine. He said:

"Well, the Japanese will probably go clear through to the Yellow River, entirely outside of Manchuria. Then there will be a big parley and negotiations. The Japanese will give up everything but Manchuria, and the League of Nations and the diplomats will think they've won a big victory.

"But no matter what happens, the Chinese are not going to be conquered. Many nations have tried it through the years. The Chinese simply marry their prettiest girls to the conquerors, and in a few generations the entire population seems to be Chinese again."

STATE CONTROL ROOSEVELT'S AIM ON RUM

Governor Declares His 1930 View Unchanged; Takes No Stand on Referendum

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, last night dissipated speculation regarding his prohibition views by referring to a letter he sent to United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, which urged a new constitutional amendment to supersede and abrogate the Eighteenth Amendment and return of state control of liquor.

His reference was prompted by a statement of Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, who said Roosevelt shortly would announce himself for a national referendum on the prohibition question. The Boston Mayor is a champion of the move to nominate the New York Governor.

The expression by Roosevelt on prohibition served to round out his views on national and international topics. He recently declared himself against the existing form of the League of Nations, against cancellation of European debts and for a breaking down of the international system of tariff barriers.

In the letter, Gov. Roosevelt said he shared the opinion expressed in an American Legion resolution that the prohibition law had "fostered excessive drinking," had led to "corruption and hypocrisy," and "disregard for law" and had "flooded the country with untaxed and illicit liquor."

Smith's Political Statement on Monday

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Although at first reported due today, the imminent "political statement" to be issued by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith now is scheduled to be made public Monday.

Speculation in political circles differed widely, some leaders believing Smith might define his attitude regarding the Democratic presidential nomination, for which he has been frequently mentioned.

Others said the statement would clarify and re-define Smith's stand on prohibition.

VARE PICKS NO HOOVER RIVAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—William S. Vare yesterday passed through Washington on his way to his winter home in Florida, and talked a little about politics, but had no new name to add to that which so far is a one-man list of Republican presidential prospects. He was asked:

"Do you see anyone else on the horizon except President Hoover for the nomination?"

He replied:

"I have not been looking very far."

He was visibly pleased with the recent announcement of Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, filing the seat to which Vare himself was elected in 1926, that he stood for a state's rights substitute for the Eighteenth Amendment and modification of the Volstead act.

House Honors Hero Of 'Lost Battalion'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The House wants one of the heroic officers of the famed "lost battalion" to have additional recognition for his services. So it agreed unanimously yesterday to pass the Swing bill which would permit Capt. Nelson M. Holderman, retired, to obtain a commission as major.

RECEIVING BARNEY DREYFUSS' CASKET TODAY FROM A TRAIN AT EAST LIBERTY DEPOT

War Correspondent Safe, Harbin Cable Indicates

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—A cable message, signed "Hunter" and filed at Harbin, Manchuria, at 8 a. m. Friday, was received by the International News Service bureau here today, apparently dispelling reports that Edward Hunter, International News Service war correspondent in Manchuria, was a prisoner of Chinese troops.

Hunter made no mention of having been arrested by the Chinese, as reported in dispatches from Tokio yesterday. These dispatches said Hunter had been captured while en route to Harbin from Mukden.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—"Oh! that's wonderful news!"

Edward Hunter, father of Edward Hunter, "missing" International News Service correspondent in the Sino-Japanese fighting zone, said that and clapped his hands today when told his son was apparently safe.

The correspondent, reported captured in Manchuria, filed a dispatch to International News Service at Harbin last night, indicating that reports of his capture were entirely false, the elder Hunter was informed this morning by International News Service in New York. The father said:

"We were so worried about him."

The father was just preparing to go to work in Brooklyn when told of the receipt of the dispatch signed by his son. He said:

"His mother has been crying, and she did not sleep much last night. I won't wake her up now, but will leave a note on the dining room table when I go to work. It will be the best news she ever received."

Warfare Dims Chinatown New Year Gayety Here

"Kon seng fau to!" meaning "Happy New Year," will be making the rounds of Pittsburgh's Chinatown beginning tonight at midnight, as the Chinese usher in the year 4609 of the old Chinese calendar.

Today and tomorrow Pittsburgh's "little Orient" will celebrate the occasion with New Year parties that are wholly unlike the noisy American New Year's Eve celebrations.

This New Year will be quieter than usual, according to William H. Yot, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh On Leong Merchants Association, because of the Chinese-Japanese trouble.

All the fun-making will be saved for a public banquet next week in the Chinese Temple, Second avenue. Then the New Year will receive a noisy American welcome, with music, speeches and entertainment from both the New and Old Worlds.

Today's feasting consists of strange dishes—water chestnuts, lichee nuts, spiced rice. Then, too, there will be roast duck and chicken. But no chop suey.

After the feasting there are cigars for the men and oranges and apples for all. The shops in Chinatown were busy today as visitors throng in and out to exchange greetings.

For 4,609 years Chinese have been observing this holiday in the same manner, according to their classics. Today also marks the twenty-first year on the new Chinese calendar.

HOLDUP IN COUNTRY CLUB FRUSTRATED BY STEWARDESS

3,500 HEAR COX ATTACK U. S. MONOPOLIES

Priest, at Duquesne, Flays Centralization of Wealth As Weapon Over Nation

Thirty-five hundred residents of Duquesne turned out to welcome the Rev. James R. Cox when he visited that city last night to speak. Seven hundred persons filled the auditorium of St. Joseph's School, the others jammed the school yard and street. Amplifiers carried the message to those unable to enter the building.

The drum and bugle corps of Memorial Post, American Legion, and a Boy Scout band, met the priest at the edge of the city and escorted him to the school, where he was welcomed by Acting Mayor E. H. Fey and other city officials.

ATTACKS WEALTHY

Father Cox continued his attack on the 500 wealthy men of the country who, he claims, control most of the nation's wealth. He declared that the present depression was caused mainly by this centralization of wealth in the hands of the 500.

Harry K. McFarland was chairman of the meeting, held by the Independent Businessmen of the city. In addition to Acting Mayor Fey, Father Cox and Mr. McFarland, short addresses were delivered by the Rev. Harry L. Crawford, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Charles S. Fehrenbach, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church; the Rev. Andrew Gavlik, pastor of Bethlehem Congregational Church; Harry Levine, World War veteran, who served with Father Cox overseas, and E. A. Steimer, Duquesne businessman, who was one of the priest's adjutants on the jobless march to Washington.

MONOPOLIES SCORED

Attacking men who amass great fortunes, Father Cox said:

"Money was never intended to be a medium of power, but a medium of exchange. Money was never intended as a commodity, but as an easy means of circulating the necessary representative value of necessary goods to be interchanged among human beings.

"Side by side with this process of centralization has marched the process of elimination which monopolies call efficiency—in other words, the elimination of the human element in business, both in the production and distribution fields."

COX TO CONFER ON RELIEF

Work of organizing Community Councils was to spread today into St. Patrick's parish in the "Strip," where Miss Isabel Kennedy and other welfare workers were to meet with Father James R. Cox to discuss centralized relief measures in the district.

Father Cox announced, some time ago, that he would co-operate wherever possible to stop duplication of relief efforts in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Mary Clark Burnett, head of the school of social research at Carnegie Tech, was to name a committee today to complete organization in the Hill district.

At a meeting in the Soho Community House yesterday it was decided to organize the Fourth Ward as a single district, instead of three. The change was the suggestion of Police Inspector James M. Hoey, Miss Kennedy said.

DECLARES WIFE HAD 2 POLICE BEAT HIM

Man Confessing Bigamy Charges Woman Watched Attack by Uniformed Pair

Judge Elder W. Marshall, presiding in Criminal Court, suddenly deferred action in a bigamy case and ordered Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk to investigate charges that two uniformed policemen had beaten the defendant at the command of his first wife. One of the suspected policemen was taken to the District Attorney's office and questioned and efforts are being made to learn the identity of the other.

James Leathers, alias Harold C. Leathers, of Fifth avenue, had pleaded guilty to bigamy. Before sentence was pronounced the Judge questioned him.

He said his former wife, accompanied by another woman and two policemen, came to his apartment at 2 a. m. and took him to Schenley Park in an automobile. There, he said, the policemen beat him. He recited:

"My wife told them to do it. As I did not resist, they stopped hitting me. Then she said:

"'You haven't drawn blood yet. Beat him more.'"

"Then they took me to an airport, where they beat me again, loosening a tooth and knocking me out. They threw water on me to bring me to, and then took me to the Wilkinsburg lockup."

'Casey' Scene, Riot at Game Stirs Jurors

Details of a baseball game in which the championship of the Monongahela Valley was at stake kept Criminal Court jurors sitting on the edge of their seats yesterday as witnesses related how with two out and two on base, the champion hitter emulated the immortal Casey by striking out. There followed a riot, a broken collarbone and a law suit.

Alexander Marconi, of Elrama, and William Byers, of West Elizabeth, were found guilty of aggravated assault and battery on Matthew Johnston, of Finleyville. It was testified they broke a baseball bat beating him and fractured his collarbone. The defendants filed motions for new trials before Visiting Judge William T. Darr.

It happened September 13. Elrama finally beat Finleyville 3 to 2, the game being played in McKeesport. The riot occurred in the sixth inning.

Charles E. Slifkin, catcher and heavy hitter for Elrama, had struck out, despite his batting average of .420. Pitcher Harold Rogerson, it was testified, chided Slifkin and that started the fight. Johnston acted as peacemaker.

Assistant District Attorney Barney Cohen called all the Elrama team as witnesses, summoning them to the stand in their team batting order.

The cause of the fire was not learned. Damage was estimated at $15,000.

SENATE HONORS MELLON BY QUICK O. K.

'Real Tribute,' Says Hoover, As Banker is Approved as Ambassador in 4 Hours

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Confirmed by the Senate as Ambassador to England, Andrew W. Mellon ceased today to be Secretary of the Treasury, a post he has filled for nearly 11 years.

In a tribute to the man which was recognized even before President Hoover pointed it out, the Senate approved his selection for America's most important diplomatic post within four hours of the time the President submitted his name. A chorus of "ayes" at the end of yesterday's session cleared Mellon's path to London.

The President said:

"This is a real tribute to Mr. Mellon."

Within a few minutes of this action, Mr. Hoover had submitted the nomination of Ogden L. Mills to be Secretary in Mellon's stead. But the Senate had adjourned and approval must wait until Monday. Speedy action upon this nomination is sought by the administration and promised by the Senate leaders.

Mellon will receive shortly the commission of his new office, but he will not sail to present his credentials for some weeks. He needs a rest, which he expects to take down south, and then private business will hold him in this country a while longer.

HOAN EXPLAINS CITY FINANCES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 6.—(Universal.)—Milwaukee is the best managed, most law-abiding and financially soundest city in America today because civic consciousness and the slogan of service, founded primarily upon the welfare of the common citizen, have replaced the dollar sign in its administration, Daniel W. Hoan, Socialist Mayor for 16 years, told a coast-to-coast radio audience yesterday.

The Mayor's talk was arranged by the Wisconsin News, Milwaukee, and the Hearst Radio Service. It originated in WISN, the Wisconsin News station, and was broadcast over a nation-wide Columbia network.

With Milwaukee in financial clover, undisturbed by hard times, while other large municipalities are struggling in the morass of debt, the address attracted wide notice.

Bandits Escape in Auto as Intended Victim Screams And Runs to Dance Floor

Police today were seeking two armed bandits whose holdup of the Hillcrest Country Club, Leechburg road, near New Kensington, was foiled last night by the courage of the stewardess.

While 85 couples were dancing on the pavilion Mrs. Norman Vaughn, the stewardess, and her sister, Mrs. Mary Held, of Canton, O., were confronted in the kitchen by the guns of the bandits. They were counting the receipts of the dance.

Scooping the bills in her hand, Mrs. Vaughn ran, screaming, from the kitchen to the dance floor, and the startled bandits fled to a waiting automobile in which they made their escape.

Mrs. Vaughn said:

"One of them stepped inside the door and commanded us to put up our hands and keep them up. The other one stood watch in the doorway. I screamed and grabbed the money and ran into the dance hall. My sister sat still and screamed. We heard the bandits go away in their car. We had about $150."

Dr. Joseph Catton, noted Stanford University psychiatrist, declared he would refuse to resume the witness stand today unless Judge Howard Speakman excluded Dr. W. C. Judd, husband of Ruth, from the courtroom.

Dr. Catton also told the court an effort had been made to "frame him," that attempts had been made to enter his hotel room at night, that he twice had been warned to "get out of the case," and that a threatening note which read "Beware!" had been delivered to him.

The psychiatrist declared a beautiful woman was involved in what he said was a "plot" against him, and asked Judge Speakman and Sheriff J. R. McFadden for "protection." Deputy sheriffs were assigned to protect him.

URGE TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON IN CHURCHES

Presbyterian Council Orders for Observance Of Bicentennial Fete

A special order of worship for a nation-wide commemoration of George Washington's bicentenial have been distributed to Presbyterian churches by the general council of the church.

In a message by Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, moderator and stated clerk of the General Assembly, a plea was made for universal observance of the event. The message said in part:

"The Colonial Presbyterian Church, through its patriotic leadership, gave sympathetic cooperation to Gen. Washington and her pastors served with the Continental troops. Among the leading officers of the army were many Presbyterian elders."

Included in the order of worship is a reprint of historic messages between the Presbyterian General Assembly and President Washington. The message from the church praised the President as a "steady, uniform, avowed friend of the Christian religion."

ST. OLAF CHOIR TO SING HERE

The organization is composed of 60 students of the college and is conducted by Dr. F. Melius Cristiansen, who was trained by Cantor Gustave Schreck at the University of Leipzig. Prof. William Schmidt, of St. Olaf's, is manager of the chorus.

The concert will be held for the benefit of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society and the proceeds will be used for relief work in the Pittsburgh district.

PRESBYTERIAN SELF-DENIAL AID ASKED

$1,000,000 Set as Goal For Denomination by Its General Council

Presbyterian clergymen of the Pittsburgh district have been asked by the Presbyterian General Council to take part in the emergency contributions in self-denial offerings which will be asked of all members of the church in the United States.

The Rev. C. Franklin Ward, secretary of the General Council, has transmitted a message to the denomination's 10,000 ministers asking for $1,000,000. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, has indorsed the message and suggests that Presbyterians devote the period from the middle of February to Easter Sunday, March 27, to "genuine, unaffected, definite self-sacrifice for service."

In his proposal he suggested:

"Some article of food can be omitted and its equivalent honestly placed on one side as a gift for His service.

"Some pleasure can be foregone and its cost added to the fund.

"A purchase that might have been made for personal advantage can be denied and the price of it definitely placed on the consecrated gift.

"One day's complete income can be consecrated to the purpose."

The appeal will be placed before the congregations, pastors said, and an attempt will be made to comply with the wish of the General Council.

EX-MISSIONARY TO BROADCAST

Lorimer, of the Forest Avenue United Presbyterian Church, Bellevue, who was a missionary in Egypt for eight years, will send greetings and deliver a message to missionaries of that denomination during the broadcast to United Presbyterian missionaries tonight at 11:15 o'clock through KDKA.

DINO GRANDI ON RADIO :-: Station Renews Fight For Power Increase :-: GUY LOMBARDO

We Now Present

—By DARRELL V. MARTIN—
Radio Editor

Darrell V. Martin

THE DYING EMBERS of WJAS' fight for KYW's wavelength were fanned to flame again late yesterday, when the local station filed an application with the Federal Radio Commission for an increase in power to 5,000 watts and for a shift in wavelength to the clear channel of 1020 kilocycles now being used by KYW in Chicago. . . . Wednesday, March 9, has been set as a tentative date for the hearing. . . . WJAS bases its claim on the second zone's under-quota status with respect to clear channels. . . . Entitled to eight clear channels, the second zone was given only seven during the 1928 allocations, its other channel being assigned on a "loan" basis to KYW in Chicago, Ill., a part of the fourth zone. . . . The present wavelength of WJAS —1290 kilocycles— is shared with several other stations.

Question a Day:

What is the difference between a "carbon" microphone and a "condenser" microphone?—Theodore W., West End.

Answer—Too deep for either of us from a technical standpoint, but there are several distinguishing characteristics. The old style mike, or carbon, is less sensitive to begin with, and it is used most nowadays on "remo" jobs or special broadcasts outside the studio, like airplane maneuvers, races, etc. The diaphragm in a carbon mike is similar to that in your telephone mouthpiece—little carbon granules are actuated by the voice waves. The patter of rain on a carbon mike sounds like the put-put-put of a machine gun to the listener. The condenser microphone is far more sensitive, uses small radio tubes for the voice pickup and is the box or searchlight type microphone you see in modern studios. The microphone with a lot of circles in it—the kind most photographed—is the old style carbon.

Studio Lights:

Niagara's mighty roar direct from the American side of the Falls, is to be picked up for WBC listeners at 9 o'clock tonight . . . microphones fastened to a standard are to be lowered over the bank at Prospect Point to pick up the powerful roar of waters. . . .

The only trade transmitter available in Shanghai for direct voice transmission to the United States is XGI, designed to use either 20 or 40 kilowatts of power. . . . It operates on 37.6 meters and has been heard by Pittsburgh amateurs when sending code. . . .

Aliceruth Johnson of the Johnson Sisters is now attending Schenley High School and that's a good reason why she has to have an excuse every Tuesday afternoon to do her commercial broadcast over KDKA at 1:30 . . . That's how Kay Kronick got her start!

The most intimate details of private lives are revealed in some of the letters received by local announcers and artists . . .

CBS has a special theme song for NBC, "Wherever You Go, Whatever You Do, We Want You to Know We're Following You." . . . NBC landed KGU in Honolulu as a unit of its vast network and just when they thought everything was all-Hawaiian for them, along came CBS with a bid for KGMB . . . they got it, so the score once again is love-all. . . .

Today's Tid Bit:

C. A. Wakeman, better known as "Uncle Kay Dee," told his air youngsters the other day of many pranks he pulled when a growing child. One of them was to tie his sister's shoestrings in knots and soak them in water.

A youngster in Beaver Falls thought this a good idea. Sunday night when his sister, a school teacher, retired, he emulated Mr. Wakeman's naughty prank.

Next morning the school teacher missed her train and there's a sharp, caustic letter about the incident on our desk.

ONE OF THE MANY PARTIES AT THE ARTISTS' AND ADSTERS' "CRAZY CRUISE" LAST NIGHT IN THE WILLIAM PENN HOTEL

600 Set Sail on 'Friske Frolic' For 'Nowhere'

The "naughtical cruise to nowhere," which the Women's Advertising Club "conducted" last night in the William Penn Hotel, was the most elaborate of its annual affairs the club has had in many years. Nearly 600 persons, entering the ballroom through a realistic porthole and over a gangplank, saw and admired the original decorations.

Around the balcony railing were run widths of green paper representing the ocean; great branches of smilax adorned the lights and we are to suppose this was seaweed, for huge fish of different shapes, sizes and states of mind floated gleefully over the crepe waters. These were most unusual fish, for not only did they wear every rainbow hue, but their occupations and expressions were most wonderful. There was one especially happy member of the pisces family that smoked a cigaret and wore earrings and there was even a Walter Winchell fish with gossipy scales.

Clusters of red, white and blue balloons and strings of Japanese lanters also added to the general decorative scheme, and a spotlight played on the replica of the S. S. Friske Frolic, aboard which the frolicers were presumed to be. To heighten the marine atmosphere, a fog horn was heard at intervals, a ship's bell sounded the hours and a more or less successful synthetic fog arose. At midnight a newspaper captioned "Cruise News," the frolic issue of the club organ "Waetivities," filled with snappy, original head lines, stories and articles, was issued and at one of the "ports of call" a native deck show was presented. There were favors of all kinds and, best of all, the proceeds will go to unemployment relief.

Peter V. Bouterse served as the very able skipper and F. A. Welton and Allen Garber were his mates. Helen Ryman was cruise chairman.

SEMI-SHEER FABRICS PROVE POPULAR FOR SPRING WEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—It is easy to see through the reasons for the extended popularity of the semi-sheer fabric. And knowing the many virtues of the various weaves of georgettes and sheer crepes, one is not surprised to find that every house just now is using such materials in abundance. One sees more little frocks in semi-sheer stuffs than in any other weight or weave and it looks as though the woman who finds the season incomplete without a georgette or crepe romain frock will be able to find several models from which to choose. Tucking that prime beautifier of even the simplest little frock, is of course very much in evidence since this material lends itself definitely to that form of ornamentation, just as it does to pleats and pleated frillings. Such frocks can easily become professionally girlish which is just another way of calling them insipid, but the clever designer watches for this and generally introduces some restraining touch that gives a slightly tailored air to the model. It is this balance that marks the fine garment as being such, and so is as important as it is in any other field where individuality rules.

* * *

SHOWN TODAY are two frocks, both in semi-sheer fabrics and both of blue, thus showing the trend of the forthcoming mode. First there is a back view of a successful afternoon frock from Lucile who does this sort of thing with a deft hand. It is of bright blue triple georgette. The capelets which taper down at the back of the bodice and are detached and twisted at the waistline are new and smart. Finely pleated frills are set into diagonal seams at the side and back of the skirt, and give the back-importance that is to be much stressed this season. This sort of back is much better than the bustle adaptations that were anything but easy to wear and most certainly were not overly good-looking.

* * *

THE OTHER FROCK, also by Lucile, is of light blue crepe romain. The wide horizontal tucks on the bodice and skirt are balanced by a single vertical band at one side, running from neckline to hem and by a deep flounce of vertical pleats. The wide sleeve is tucked and creased in deep folds over the elbow and gathered into a snug wrist.

Gov. Roosevelt Takes A Popular Shift

(The following editorial is reprinted from the New York Evening Post of February 3, 1932):

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt was compelled to admit his candidacy for the Presidency when the time came for filing his name in the Dakota primaries. Yesterday, in his address before the New York State Grange at Albany, he carried this course of enforced candor one step further. He broke his long, and probably not inconvenient, silence on issues. He discussed national questions.

The Governor declared himself against our participation in the League of Nations. He declared himself against cancellation of the war debts. He declared himself for an international conference to arrange tariff reciprocities.

These declarations will hardly set the world afire. They were not intended to. As to the first, the Governor went directly back upon himself. He abandoned the League of Nations, in behalf of which he spoke with such intensity in 1920, when he was a candidate for the Vice Presidency. He may be as sincere in this change as is Mr. Newton D. Baker, but it certainly is noteworthy that the shift puts him on what is the popular side today. He takes the popular side, too, on debt cancellations and on tariff readjustments.

Indeed, the Governor either takes the popular side or soft pedals almost ALL issues. How silent is he over prohibition! And how unfilled with moral indignation is he over Tammany corruption!

The Governor is pursing, we fear, the form of campaign now prescribed by politicians for presidential candidates. That is, to tell the people nothing that may offend. This is the trick by which weak men get into the White House. We regret to say that Franklin Roosevelt appears to be turning it with great success.

AMORTIZATION EASES DRAIN ON CREDIT

Monthly Payments on Home Mortgages for This Year Estimated at Two Billion

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The man who is paying off the mortgage on his home month by month is helping to save the nation's credit structure from an additional strain of $2,000,000,000 this year.

That sum is the total which would call for refinancing in 1932 if 2,200,000 owners of mortgaged homes were not repaying their loans in installments.

A survey by the United States Building and Loan League discloses that repayment on schedule of these monthly obligations of home mortgagors is the "most conspicuous feature" of general conditions in the building and loan field so far this year.

TOTAL DEBT $ BILLIONS

Prompt payment by home owners of amortized monthly repayment first mortgages saved the country's credit structure from an extra $2,000,000,000 burden last year, the league finds, and the situation gives promise of repeating itself.

Indebtedness of these mortgagors, according to the league's latest figures, totals approximately $8,000,000,000. Had this amount been loaned on the four-year straight mortgage plan, a fourth of the debt would have fallen due last year, and another quarter this year.

A large majority of these borrowers who have continued to meet monthly installments out of current earnings, the league has found, are small wage earners and families with low incomes.

AVERAGE LOAN $3,500

During the last 10 years their individual mortgages have averaged between $3,500 and $3,600 with an average of 434,000 home buyers being added each year to the list of mortgagors arranging such loans.

This $8,000,000,000 in amortized mortgages, the league points out, constitutes about 90 per cent of the total assets of the nation's 11,777 building and loan associations.

At the time the loan is made the borrower signs an agreement to make regular repayments, giving the association a contractual income from all its loans, reducing the actual amount outstanding on each by some 12½ per cent, or 9 per cent a year, according to the time contracted for to cancel the entire loan."

Newsprint Output Lower During 1931

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Curtailment efforts of newsprint manufacturers are reflected in the production figures for last year. Total output in the United States, as reported by the Department of Commerce, amounted to 1,157,497 tons, compared with 1,282,372 tons in 1930. Canadian production was 2,220,775 tons, contrasted with 2,504,147 tons. Stocks on hand in the United States on December 31 totaled 32,709 tons, against 32,061 tons at the end of 1930. Canadian stocks were 54,214 tons, compared with 36,777 tons at the end of 1930.

Stock Exchange Topics

Loan Application Causes Anxiety Over Pennsy Dividend

The move by the Pennsylvania in applying for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation made a poor impression on speculative sentiment and was responsible in a large way for the selling which came into the rail group yesterday. Some difficulty was found in seeking to provide an explanation for the action in view of the fact that the road recently ordered its regular dividend. Maintenance of the present $2 rate would call for an outlay of about $2,200,000 against the $5,000,000 which the road seeks to obtain to go ahead with its improvement schedule. For one thing, the action led to anxiety over the dividend, and in view of the fact that "Pennsy" has always been considered one of the strongest roads, its action led to the assumption that other big roads might follow its lead.

Houses which are going to the trouble of sounding out their clientele report a growing interest in the market at the moment. One large firm, which some months ago discontinued its market letter and recommendations because of lack of response shown, is quite elated over the result of its latest experiment. This house dispatched a total of 25 letters to prospective customers merely as a means of checking to ascertain if there had been any important change of attitude in recent months. And the response while not startling was nevertheless viewed as encouraging inasmuch as eight of the customers responded.

Curious as it may seem, considering the apparent lack of incentive for such accumulation, odd-lot buying is said still to be cutting quite a figure in the daily trade on the Stock Exchange. Demand from the public for broken lots, according to one of the leading firms doing such business, is relatively larger than at any time in recent years. This element may, of course, be seeking to average down on the cost of its holdings. At any rate such buying it is contended, continues to take a substantial aggregate volume of stock out of the market over a period of time.

An assortment of rumors was current in connection with the heavy selling in Auburn Automobile which extended its decline abruptly yesterday, falling back for a further loss of some 7 points at the low levels. The selling in the issue was not particularly widespread in its origin, but rather came very largely from several special sources. Most of the rumors abroad were discounted, with the belief prevailing in unusually well posted circles that the January registration figures, which should be forthcoming early next week, will provide ample explanation for the weakness.

Conservative interests point out that nothing has happened in the market to change the waiting attitude which is favored by most observers. Several interests are of the opinion that scale purchases on good reactions which might develop will prove profitable later on.

Several times this week there have been statements from good quarters that good buying has been coming into Atchison. It is probable that if such buying has been in progress it has been accomplished quickly and on a scale when the stock has receded. If this view is correct it is certain that the influence of this accumulation must make itself felt later on.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Decline — Local List Steady

MARKET DRIFTS OFF IN QUIET TRADING

Only Fractional Declines Shown by List Leaders; U. S. Steel Holds Steady

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The stock market showed a small drift downward in quiet trading today.

American Telephone, Union Pacific, Eastman, International Harvester, Woolworth and Coca Cola sagged a point, but American Tobacco, Chesapeake and Ohio, North American and General Electric confined their reaction to about half a point. United States Steel was very steady.

Uneasiness caused by recent reports of currency hoarding was partly offset by plans for the determined nationwide campaign against the tendency.

Bankers stressed the fact that the new Reconstruction Finance Corporation was now fitted with the necessary equipment to stem the bill-pinching urge. By devoting a portion of its resources to loans to banks in temporary difficulties, it was reasoned that confidence of depositors would be restored at reasonably early date. It was also observed that the condition of the larger banks was unusually good.

January production figures showing steel ingot output at 26.54 per cent of capacity last month against 23.58 per cent in December was in line with expectations. This showing tended to strengthen supposition in Wall street that a further reduction in steel wages might be announced, although authoritative spokesmen for the industry declined to comment.

Weekly mercantile reports showing a step-up in wholesale lines were well received by the financial community, which evinced particular interest in the gains shown by the wool, cotton and shoe industries.

Foreign exchanges were steady with sterling opening off 3/8 cent at $3.45 1/8.

SUGAR PLAN THREATENED

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—An apparent threat to the stability of the Chadbourne stabilization plan has sent raw sugar prices to record lows on the New York market.

Market circles in New York point out that differences between Cuba and Java, the two leading signatories of the Chadbourne plan, have probably caused the recent unsettlement in the staple. Inability of these two countries to reach an agreemnt on production quotas has causd heavy selling for more than a week and it was feared that the plan, which depends for success on harmony among the producing countries, was in jeopardy.

Thomas L. Chadbourne, author of the plan, said on returning from Europe recently that a further reduction in the crop would be necessary to offset smaller consumption. Mr. Chadbourne is now in Cuba.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

RESTRICTIONS URGED FOR BANKING

Extreme Wing Would Put Credit Disposal Under Government Supervision

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Feb. 6—Abuse of liberty in the realm of banking has been followed by a demand for greater governmental restrictions. The Glass bill, before the Senate—itself a drastic measure—was formulated after careful consultation with banking authorities.

A more extreme wing would put the very disposal of bank credit under governmental supervision. Theoretically the idea is not without logical basis but as a practical administrative matter we seem a long way from being willing to substitute bureaucratic rule for banking discretion. However, if bankers continue to be careless with depositors' funds and to be guided too much by the profit motif the extreme reform may be attempted.

Mr. Rukeyser.

'CREDIT MINTS'

The government already rigidly supervises and controls the issuance of coin and currency. The mint is a public institution and properly considered one. But in the United States we have gradually substituted a credit system for a hard money system. In an economic sense, the real coin of the realm is bank credit, and accordingly lending institutions in a sense become credit mints.

Focussing on the monetary phases of the economic depression, H. C. Cutting, of Oakland, Cal., a west coast economist proposes government regulating of the granting of credit. Perhaps he overvalues the capacity of bureaucrats to exercise wisdom where the discretion of private financiers breaks down but his theory is that the public authorities would be guided by public needs, whereas the private banker is actuated by the desire for personal gain.

WOULD REMOVE FLAW

Proposing a declaration of economic independence in his new book, entitled "Liquified Wealth," Mr. Cutting asserts:

"Believing as I do that trade is the foundation of civilization and that the economic, social and spiritual betterment of mankind is dependent upon its safety and improvement, and recognizing that the medium of exchange is the mainspring of trade, and that on its security and stability depends the progress of our country and the welfare of our people:

"I hereby declared my purpose to assist in removing from our financial system that basic flaw which periodically upsets business, creates bread lines and brings uncertainty and poverty to the many while causing burdensome wealth accumulate in the hands of a few: "Therefore, I pledge myself and beseech my fellow citizens: First, that we may understand the problems confronting our civilization and our country; second, that we may induce others to gain the required knowledge, and, finally, that we may secure political action to put into effect improvements in our financial system that will free us from economic shackles and permit the realization of those ideals which have actuated the struggle for human liberty, happiness and social betterment from the beginning of civilization."

SAFETY GLASS CALL EXPANDS

Safety plate glass is in strong demand from automobile producers and is the outstanding feature of the present market for flat glass products, according to American Glass Review. Production of safety laminated plate glass has been increased to the capacity of several large producers during January and at least one unit has been unable to keep up with shipment orders. There was little safety plate glass in stock at the beginning of January and the sudden rise in demand although hoped for, was greater than anticipated.

January therefore probably was the biggest month for receipt of orders for safety glass that the flat glass industry has enjoyed since the introduction of this form of glass. The demand for safety plate glass is in sharp contrast to demand for other forms of flat glass. There has been some demand for plate glass from distributors but most of it is believed to be for the purpose of adjusting stocks.

Western Public Service To Report Profit

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

WESTERN PUBLIC SERVICE Corporation, supplying natural gas in Wyoming, Colorado and Utah and largely financed with Pittsburgh capital, will show a profit of from $25,000 to $30,000 in its annual report.

This does not sound impressive until it is recalled that 1931 was only the second full year of the organization's operation. In 1930, the first full year of operations, a net loss of $826,433 was reported after providing for taxes, depreciation, depletion and all other charges.

Officials of leading natural gas companies state that it ordinarily takes nearly three years for a company distributing in virgin territory to show a profit. Western Public Service Corporation has been handicapped by the low state of general business and particularly the depression in the copper industry, which normally would buy large quantities of gas. In view of these circumstances, the results for 1931 appear to be distinctly favorable.

Serves Salt Lake City

WESTERN PUBLIC SERVICE and its subsidiaries control 120,000 acres of gas lands in the three states covered by their operations. They serve Salt Lake City in addition to smaller towns in the territory. Mining and smelting organizations are regarded as the greatest potential users, but the development of sales has been slow, due to the low price of copper and other metals.

The fact that a profit was made in 1931 in the face of unfavorable general conditions may be taken as an indication that the company has definitely established the soundness of its business. Further improvement may be expected in 1932 and, with the restoration of satisfactory business conditions, the real earning power of the property can be demonstrated.

Has Small Indebtedness

THE ORGANIZATION IS in a particularly good condition to weather the development period and the time of poor business through which it is now passing. The parent company has no funded debt or preferred stock. Subsidiaries had a funded debt of $1,978,000 at the close of 1930. In comparison to physical properties carried at $33,512,420 and total assets of $36,545,954, this appeared exceptionally small.

The only direct capital obligation of the parent company consists of 1,999,996 shares of stock without par value. At the current price of 4½ for the stock, the company is given a market value less than $9,000,000, while the book value of the stock is $31,229,587, or $15.61 a share.

The company has the benefit of a management with exceptional experience in the natural gas business. Principal officers and directors are also connected with the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation and the Lone Star Gas Corporation.

George W. Crawford, chairman, also is chairman of Columbia Gas; L. B. Denning, vice president, is president of Lone Star. T. B. Gregory, vice president of Western Public Service, is also vice president of both Columbia Gas and Lone Star.

SCRAP MARKET GROWS ACTIVE

Although no gains in prices on heavy melting steel have been established, more activity has come into the market at both Pittsburgh and Chicago. At Pittsburgh more than 10,000 tons of heavy melting steel are reported to have been sold to interests who did some buying early in January. Although one mill has held up shipments of scrap another has been taking old material more freely. There is little surplus scrap available in the district and dealers are reported paying at least $10 a ton to cover commitments.

Movement of scrap at Chicago is better than for some time, with prices steady.

Ford of Belgium Dividend Omitted

BRUSSELS, Feb. 6.—Ford Motor Company of Belgium has omitted the dividend on 1931 income. A dividend of 12½ per cent was paid last year on 1930 income.

Net profits in 1931 amounted to 32,000,000 francs, compared with 42,900,000 francs in 1930. Sales were approximately the same as in 1930 but low prices caused the decline in income.

UNCHANGED

There has been no noticeable change in the local business situation according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. The movement of merchandise at retail is being stimulated to some extent by extensive advertising but winter merchandise is still moving slowly. There is some buying of spring wearing apparel but this is largely of cheaper grades for which jobbers report a fair demand.

Building operations are being held up to some extent due to an effort on the part of the contractors to secure a reduction in wages against which some of the trades are fighting. There is comparatively little new work being started but a few large construction jobs are being delayed owing to men not working. Demand for lumber and other building materials continues very quiet.

Bituminous coal market shows no material change, with production still averaging about 25 per cent lower than a year ago.

There has been no noticeable improvement in collections in this district, which still average slow.

Laundry Machine Purchases Stock

CINCINNATI, Feb. 6.—American Laundry Machine Company states that the company has purchased and is holding in its treasury 24,864 shares of stock as of December 31, 1931. At the annual meeting February 23 directors will ask permission to purchase up to 20,000 additional shares. Future purchases of capital stock will be made from collection of receivables of which the company had $19,767,234 on December 31, 1930.

COPPER PRICE DROPS LOWER

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The price of copper was reduced ¼-cent a pound to 6¼ cents. This reduction brings the price back to the record low of 6¼ cents established in December.

The copper trade has heard that metal has been available in the last several days at as low as 6¼ cents from second hands. The 6¼ cent price was named yesterday by producers who had been holding at 6½ cents since last week's reduction in the export price.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Bank clearings continue very much reduced. The total this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review of $5,522,767,000 was 33.0 per cent lower than in the same week of last year. At New York City the amount was $3,858,465,000, a decline of 32.2 per cent, while the aggregate for cities outside of New York of $1,664,298,000 was 34.9 per cent lower.

STEEL INGOT PRODUCTION UNCHANGED

Expected Business Pickup To Cause Rate Increase; Price Still Irregular

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel production this week has been unchanged from last week, at about 27 per cent of capacity. Apparently the previous increases merely represented recovery from the special year-end dip, the rate of the last fortnight approximating the rate on December 1 or the average rate in October.

Increase of seasonal character by reason of the approach of spring is not apparent, and was not expected so early. In active times there was anticipation and January witnessed a substantial increase in demand and production, but now procrastination is the rule.

GAINS EXPECTED

Steel producers are only mildly disappointed at the course of affairs to date, but will be disappointed if February does not develop a marked increase in tonnage. Monthly increases are expected for an indefinite time, replacing the familiar experience of production rising to a peak in March or April and then declining to a low July. These expectations are based upon seasonal influence plus general business and financial improvement due to operation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the railroad wage reduction, the improved condition of banks and other considerations.

Finished steel prices continue to show various irregularities, but no additional outright declines have developed in the last three weeks. For four months through last October there was a notably stable market, irregularities then beginning gradually to appear. Perforce stable markets will be developed again, but the time and level are problematical. The irregular lines may be on the verge of stability now, but if so the fact has not become apparent. The average decline in three months, figured against all finished steel products, is a small one.

INDUSTRY BALANCED

It now appears in the retrospect that there has been a period of four months of virtually uniform steel demand and production, individual variations being of minor consequence. This is probably the "irreducible minimum" which months earlier was erroneously thought to have been reached. There is very marked contrast with the 27 months preceding, when there was continuous and rapid decrease in production, interrupted merely by sharp rises in the first two months of 1930 and the first three months of 1931.

The record high was made in June, 1929, when steel ingot production was at 61,600,000 tons a year, while the average rate in the last four months has been about 17,700,000 tons a year, representing 71 per cent decrease. When business recession began steel demand had great momentum, which carried a long while, in contrast with previous depression or panic experiences. A panic occurred late in October, 1907. The month made a new high record in pig iron production, but three months later, in January, 1908, production was only 45 per cent as great. There was much canceling and suspending by steel buyers while mills themselves suspended some shipments, doubling the financial condition of the buyers involved.

TIN PLATE SLOW

Tin plate business is very sluggish, partly on account of uncertainties as to canning this season since many canners lost money last year and are not in good financial condition now, and partly because with the drop in exchange tin plate can be imported, with the 1 cent a pound duty at much below the present official price, which is purely nominal.

Fabricated structural steel inquiry has been looking up somewhat, with few large undertakings, but many small jobs of various character. Fabricating shop operations have been at a low rate lately and little or no further decrease is to be expected with lettings running as they now are.

DREYFUSS BROUGHT HOME

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Fans Mourn Dreyfuss. Builder and Uplifter. Leader in Reforms.

Majors' Guiding Hand. Great Record Here. Park Is Monument.

MAGNATE'S DEATH BLOW TO BASEBALL

NOT ONLY THE fan community of Pittsburgh and environs, but the whole baseball world, was still stunned today from the shock it had experienced in the death of Barney Dreyfuss, dean of magnates. The grim reaper had laid a heavy hand on notables of the diamond pastime during the preceding 12 months. Sam Dreyfuss, Ernest S. Barnard, Ban Johnson, Garry Herrmann, Charley Murphy, Jimmy McAleer, Charley Comiskey and William Wrigley, Jr., one after another, had been called to the beyond, but the hardest blow of all to the national sport fell in the passing of the Pirate owner.

Barney Dreyfuss

In all the history of baseball, no man ever did more than Mr. Dreyfuss for the great outdoor pastime. No magnate, past or present, gave more of his personal goods, time or attention to the interests of his own club and the game in general. Other large and varied business holdings were always secondary to his love for baseball. That was at once his life work, his hobby and his only recreation, and underlying all his four decades of labor in its behalf were the principles of honesty, fair-dealing and sportsmanship.

IT IS DOUBTFUL if there has ever been another magnate who combined in greater degree executive ability and knowledge of the playing end of the game. He was a master of the business side, from doing his own bookeeping to settling baseball war between rival leagues, and there was nothing he didn't know about plays and players down on the field.

Hardly a player in the most obscure minor league could be named about whom Mr. Dreyfuss could not give you some dependable information. He never missed a game when his health permitted his attending it, and he never failed to keep a complete box score down to the smallest detail. One of the sport's greatest builders and business men, and a standout among the magnates of all time, he was also, down at the bottom of it all, one of the crowd—a fan.

OTHER CLUB OWNERS, in the big things of the game, all looked up to him and respected his judgment. They were not only glad to leave to him the making of the playing schedule, at which he was the country's acknowledged master hand, but they turned to him on every other important question that came up.

The advice, personal direction and even financial aid of the Pittsburgher carried his fellow magnates through many a crisis.

MANY OF THE reforms and changes that make baseball an improved game today were suggested and put through by Mr. Dreyfuss. He was one of the foremost advocates of the foul-strike rule, adopted in 1901, and also of the regulation, adopted the same year, that keeps the catcher up behind the bat at all times. The modern world series, sportdom's greatest show, grew out of the revival that the Pirate owner and Henry J. Killilea, then head of the Boston Red Sox, started in 1903. He eliminated the old national commission. The banishment of trick pitching and freak deliveries, in 1920, with the restriction of spitball hurling to the men then using that style, was due directly to a crusade made by Mr. Dreyfuss. He branded trick pitching as being akin to playing with marked cards. He fought joke home runs and the cutting down of the playing space at ball parks, to make room for more seats, and he was instrumental in eliminating the rabbit ball.

Fred Clarke

THE GREAT RECORD that Pittsburgh has made since the beginning of the Dreyfuss regime in 1900 with Fred Clarke as manager, together with the proud possession of the world's most beautiful ball park, will stand as particular monuments to the memory of the deceased club head.

No city in the major leagues has enjoyed a better grade of baseball on the whole than Pittsburgh has known during the 32 seasons of Dreyfuss ownership. Before his coming, fifth place in 1889 and second place in 1893 marked the only times the local National League club finished higher than sixth position.

BUT UNDER THE direction and skillful operation of Mr. Dreyfuss, with his always progressive policies, the Pirates have made a record for the last 32 years that is unsurpassed anywhere. The fact that they have won six pennants and two world championships, losing another pennant by only one game, is just part of the story.

In those 32 years they finished in the first division no fewer than 26 times. In addition to winning six flags they landed second six times, were tied for that position once, finished third six times, were tied for that place once and came in fourth six times.

THE BIG MERGER of the Pittsburgh and Louisville clubs in 1900, which brought Mr. Dreyfuss and Harry Pulliam to this city, had not been planned as a consolidation at first. It was to have been a huge player trade, with Pittsburgh giving $25,000 and five players—Jack Chesbro, his coming greatness unforeseen; George Fox, Johnny O'Brien, Arthur Madison and Billy Gould—to Louisville in exchange for 14 athletes, made up of Manager Clarke, Honus Wagner and Rube Waddell, three of the greatest diamond figures in history; Deacon Phillippe, Tommy Leach, Claude Ritchey, Chief Zimmer, Pat Flaherty, Tacks Latimer, Walter Woods, Elton Cunningham, Tom Merritt, Mike Kelly and Chuck Doyle.

BUT BEFORE ANOTHER season came around the National League was reduced from 12 clubs to eight, Louisville being one of the cities dropped. Local interests wanted to call the deal off, but Mr. Dreyfuss insisted on his option being honored and gained control.

To the players coming from Louisville were added such Pirate holdovers as Chesbro, Jesse Tannehill, Sam Leever, Fred Ely, Bill Shriver, Frank Dillon, Clarence Beaumont, Jimmy Williams, Tom McCreery and Tom O'Brien.

WITH A LINEUP composed of the stars of two clubs, the Pirates finished second in 1900, and then went on to win the pennant in 1901-02-03, fewer players leaving the Bucs during wartime to join the so-called outlaw American League than jumped from any other club in the National loop.

In 1903 Messrs. Dreyfuss and Killilea arranged a world series on their own hook. The Red Sox won, but each losing Pirate received $1,316.25 as his share of the series receipts, while each of the winning Red Sox players received only $1,182. The difference was due to the fact that President Dreyfuss turned his entire share over to his players.

George Gibson

FORESEEING BASEBALL'S growth and showing his faith in its future, Mr. Dreyfuss in 1909 moved his club from the North Side to Oakland, "to make the games more inviting to women," as he put it, and there he built the National League's first huge concrete and steel plant. He kept its beauty unmarred ever since, refusing to allow advertising signs on the walls at any price. A few years ago he was offered $4,000,000 for the club, of which he then owned 72 per cent. He refused it. He wanted to keep the club for his only son, Sam. Just a year back, all but 16 days, Sam died. The shock was terrific. It broke the father's heart, but he tried his best to hide it, and with the spirit that had won pennants and survived baseball wars, he carried on, until now he has been called out himself by the Great Umpire. Probably, if he could speak, his order still would be to carry on. That's what Manager George Gibson and the rest of the club feel sure would be his wish, and Gibson today voiced the sentiment of players and officials alike when he said: "All that we can do now is go out and win the pennant for him." But baseball without Barney Dreyfuss, in Pittsburgh at least, just won't seem like baseball at all.

PITT PASSERS PRIMED FOR NOTRE DAME

PROBABLE LINEUP

A couple of basketball teams, one good and the other great, meet tonight at the Stadium Pavilion. Pitt, the good team, is the choice to bow to Notre Dame, the great team, but despite the fact that the Panthers are expected to lose, the usual crowd attracted by the glamor of Notre Dame athletic teams is expected to be in attendance.

Capt. Crowe

This will be the ninth meeting on the hardwood between the schools. Five times the Panthers have been victorious over the Irish, and there would be no objections tonight among Pitt players and fans if they made it six.

Notre Dame, however, with such stars as Moose Krause, Ray DeCook and Capt. Norb Crowe in its lineup, will rule a heavy favorite, and there is hardly a chance that the Panthers can stop the Keogan scoring machine.

Every coach whose team has faced Notre Dame this year has rated it a super-team, and this list includes Coach Carlson, of Pitt.

Carlson himself, while not professing any false optimism, is not predicting a defeat. He is well pleased with the way his players have been performing in the past two or three games, and believes that they have taken a new lease on life.

He intends starting the same lineup that beat Carnegie Tech on Tuesday night, although he has an idea that he may start Al Wrobleski in place of one of his two co-captains.

In the preliminary, Paul Zehfuss will send his Pitt freshmen out after their sixth in a row against Dormont High School. The little Panthers will be bolstered by the addition of Vic Bache, center on the Scott High state championship quitet last season.

THURNBLAD OUT OF TITLE PLAY

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Augie Kieckhefer, Chicago, climbed into a tie with Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, for the lead in the world three-cushion billiards championship tournament last night, using the defending titleholder, Arthur Thurnblad, also of Chicago, as a stepping stone.

Kieckhefer eliminated Thurnblad, 50 to 33, in 40 innings.

Gus Copulos, of Eugene, Ore., helped Kieckhefer's cause by beating Reiselt, 50 to 29, in 42 innings.

Both of today's matches will be vital to the leaders. Reiselt tackles Thurnblad in the afternoon, and Kieckhefer engages Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., tonight.

M'CARTHY GETS VERDICT

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Jack McCarthy, young Boston heavyweight, last night piled up enough points in the last three rounds to win the decision from Big Boy Rawson, home-town rival, in the Boston Garden's 10-round feature.

OLYMPIC TEAMS IN SQUABBLE

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—International good will and amity, avowed purpose of the Olympic games, has collapsed completely after tottering about the winter division on palsied legs for almost a full day.

In fact, before the 1932 winter games actually were 24 hours old, the altruistic love of sport for sport's sake, the good fellowship of an international congress of athletes, had disappeared entirely. Swords were unsheathed and the boys who really don't like each other began to tell the truth.

GREAT PUZZLE

Outwardly the situation was under control for the moment today. The decision of Joseph K. Savage, chairman of the United States Olympic speed skating committee, disqualifying Alex Hurd and Frank Stack, of Canada, and Eddie Wedge, of Detroit, from the final of 10,000 meters championship, had in effect been reversed. But the underlying causes of all the bitterness had not been touched. The representatives of the Scandinavian nations apparently never will be reconciled to the American style of racing.

After four hours of argument last night, during which Peter J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic committee, threatened to withdraw the entire Canadian team from the games if Stack and Hurd were not put back in the final, and the Scandinavians said they'd go home if they were, Savage declared yesterday's heats in the 10,000 meters events "no races" and ordered them skated over again today.

FINAL MONDAY

The final of the last men's speed skating event will go over from today to Monday, probably at 2:30 p. m.

Savage disqualified the North Americans, along with Shozo Ishiwara, of Japan, on the cumulative protest of Norway, Finland, Sweden and Japan, who had complained in the morning, after Jack Shea, brilliant young Dartmouth sophomore, had raced to his second straight Olympic title in the final of the 1,500 meters event.

While the net results yesterday brought no progress in the 10,000 meters, the United States stepped further out in front in its drive for an initial Olympic games championship. Although Alex Hurd, Bill Logan and Frank Stack finished in that order behind Shea in the 1,500 meters final, Ray Murray and Herb Taylor, New Yorkers, took fifth and six places, respectively.

The United States thus led with 43 points today, while Canada boasted 25 and Norway, only other scorer, 8.

Enzo Fiermonte, of Italy, gave Jackie Wilson, Pittsburgh middleweight, a beating for eight rounds to receive the unanimous decision of the judges.

The Italian led all the way, dealing Wilson a world of punishment, but couldn't put the tough Pittsburgher down. Fiermonte weighed 159½, Wilson 158½.

FAMILY MEETS BODY OF BUC OWNER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

All that remained mortal of Barney Dreyfuss was back in his home town today. The great city which owes her rare baseball fame to the little boy from Germany, took him into her arms while thousands mourned.

The sorrowing members of his family who accompanied him on the sad return from New York, may find comfort in the virtuous life he left behind him. And Barney may find rest in the shadow of the prettiest ball field in the land, a field that will stand as a monument to his enterprise and daring when baseball was in its infancy.

WIRES POUR IN

A sheaf of telegrams was piled up at baseball hearquarters this morning, the messages of condolence coming from prominent men in various walks of life from all points of the compass.

The messages reflected the esteem in which the pioneer of the sport was held by his friends and associates. The following from Bobby Quinn, president of the Boston Red Sox is typical:

"Dear Mrs. Dryfuss: It was with the most sincere regret that I just heard of the passing of your good husband. I numbered him as one of my very best friends. In all our dealings we never needed any agreements—his word was all that was necessary. The loss to baseball is irreparable, for he was ever the game's strongest champion."

Pirate headquarters in the Flannery Building, Oakland, were a sad sight as the owner of the Pirates came home. Manager George Gibson, Secretary Sam Watters and the other attaches of the office were bowed in sorrow. Gibson and Watters were among the close friends who were at the East Liberty Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad to meet the body.

MANY SEND MESSAGES

The sad funeral party included the widow of the departed magnate, his daughter, Mrs William E. Benswanger; Benswanger, and Mrs. Sam Dreyfuss, widow of the son of the Pirate owner, who died almost one year ago. The members of the family kept a constant vigil at the bedside of their beloved one during the two months he was confined in Mount Sinai Hospital.

Among those who sent early messages of sympathy were, officials of the Philadelphia Athletics; W. F. Knebelkamp, president, and William (Cap) Neal, general manager of the Louisville Colonels; Adam Comorosky, George E. Muehlebach, president of the Kansas City Blues; Peter F. Kelly, of Boston, a former traveling secretary of the Pirates; Charley Wood, Jake Pitler, William Harridge, president of the American League; William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs; Edward G. Barrow, secretary of the New York Yankees, and Joseph Bearwald, president of the San Francisco Missions.

The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock tomorrow at Rodef Shalom Temple. Burial will be beside his son, Sam, who died last February 22.

MANY NOTABLES DIE

It was only two weeks ago that William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs, died at Phoenix, Ariz. Within the preceding 15 months such well known figures as Ernest Barnard, Ban Johnson, Charles Comiskey, James McAleer, Charles Webb Murphy, William Baker and Garry Herrmann answered the Umpire's last call.

Dreyfuss, except for one year, 1930, when he turned direction of the Pirates over to his son, Sam, had been actively connected with baseball since 1884. He obtained an interest at that time in a semi-professional team at Paducah, Ky., where he had gone as an immigrant German boy three years before.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

GAMES TONIGHT

New York Americans at Montreal Maroons
New York Rangers at Toronto

By CARL W. SHATTO

The London Tecumsehs, who snapped the Syracuse Stars six-game victory string with a 4-0 triumph on Thursday, will attempt to put an end to another winning streak when they meet the Yellow Jackets in an International Hockey League game at Duquesne Garden tonight.

The winning streak in question is that of Pittsburgh over the London entry. The Tecumsehs have made the going very rough for all other rivals, and only against the Jackets have they been unable to turn in a triumph. In four games with the Reidmen they have scored only one goal, and one tie is the best that they can show for their efforts.

TECUMSEHS STRONG

The Tecumsehs of a few weeks ago and the Tecumsehs of today, however, are somewhat different teams, and the Jackets are likely to find themselves right up to their ears in opposition. Before handing Syracuse a 4-0 jolt, the Canadians handed Buffalo a 1-0 setback which means that the visitors haven't been scored upon in their last two starts.

The Pittsburgh lineup tonight will be the same as that which Coach Charley Reid sent against the Windsor Bulldogs here Thursday. Goalie Abbie Cox still is unable to return to action as the result of an injury which he suffered in Detroit on Sunday, and Gordon (Sonny Boy) Baxter, who have a great exhibition against the league champs, will continue to guard the Pittsburgh cage.

NO LINEUP CHANGE

Coach Reid had just about abandoned efforts to trade Eddie Rodden for Len Grosvenor, Ottawa National League star now with the Bronx Canadian-American Leaguers, which means that there will be no changes in the front line combinations. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		London
Baxter	G	Stuart
Fraser	L D	Howe
Reiser	R D	Holway
Fields	C	Hoard
Pendleton	L W	Gish
Greig	R W	Pennington

Subs—Pittsburgh, Matte, Miller; London, Barton, Arbour, Lowrey, Pike, King, Lemon, Carrigan, Quenneville, Neville, Benson, Hollinger, Schneider, Loughlin.

BUCKEYE RIDERS HERE TONIGHT

George Vang, David I. McCahill and Vose Babcock probably will start the game for the Pittsburgh polo team when it lines up against the Cleveland Freebooters here tonight in Hunt Armory. This is the first game in which Pittsburgh has participated under the agreements of the Inter-City Polo League. Akron, Youngstown and Cleveland are included in the league.

The Pittsburgh team is made up of representatives of the four local teams of the Pittsburgh Polo League. The game will start at 8:30 with Col. George Cherrington as referee. The lineup:

Pittsburgh		Cleveland
George Vang		Lehmann
David I. McCahill		W. Mahon
Vose Babcock		Clapp

Pittsburgh substitutes—Adams, Parrott, Walton and Collins.

JONES SCORES CLASSY WIN

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The uncrowned light-heavyweight champion of the world looked the part of a real kingpin as Eddie Kapphan opened his new arena in Center avenue at Addison street last night.

Billy Jones, former local Negro boy, who went east to seek fame and fortune in the ring, was the hero. Fresh from a technical knockout victory over Battling Bozo in the N. B. A. light-heavyweight tournament in Chicago, Jones appeared to be 100 per cent improved over his winning fight against Maxie Rosenbloom, the recognized champion of the 175-pounders, at Motor Square Garden a year ago.

Fighting with confidence born of success, Billy slaughtered the hard-to-fight rangy George Pavlick, of Johnstown and Cleveland. He couldn't knock out his man, or even floor him, but he beat him so badly that George will be a long time getting over the chastisement.

HANDS OUT BEATING

Fast and clever and ringwise, Billy was master of the situation throughout and hammered the body until it was red, and fairly lathered his opponent's head and face with both fists. Only Pavlick's gameness and holding and covering saved him from a knockout. A few times George cut loose with cracking rights to the head that landed, but he was unable to follow up, and Billy resumed where he had left off.

Both weighed 172½ pounds. Pavlick is a better fighter than he showed against Jones. It was Jones' class that made the loser look bad by comparison.

Billy Holt, Homewood Negro, 145, repeated an earlier eight-round victory over Davy Grove, of the North Side, 145½, in the semi-final. Grove had a slight edge in the early rounds, during which he continually forced the fight and scored effectively, with Holt running and jabbing. However, Holt finally settled down and clinched the decision by outslugging his man decisively in the last two rounds.

ROOMY NEW ARENA

Carl Gross, of Braddock, Frank Klaus' heavyweight, 186, bested Charley Brodd, of McKeesport, 184¾, in the second bout, and Sharkey Lesko, of McKeesport, 144, won over Mike Thomas, of North Lima, O., 145¾, in the opener. These two bouts were not so hot, but the last two left nothing to be desired.

A fair-sized crowd witnessed the opening show and seemed to like the layout of the place. It is large and roomy and ought to be a popular spot for the followers of the sport.

Frank Brown and Frank Ferris were the judges and Red Robinson refereed all bouts. Tommy Grant was the timer, Ray Eberle the announcer and Dr. M. R. Goldman the commission physician. An orchestra furnished music before and after the bouts.

Between Rounds

Vital contests impend for this afternoon as campaigning for Class A honors of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association Inter-Club League draws near to conclusion. Coach Harold Mortlock's P. A. A. combatants, struggling fiercely to retain the titular laurels they annexed a year ago, stand deadlocked with Ben Pope's crack Keystone A. C. contingent, the Winged Head host having moved into the tie by virtue of downing Allegheny Country Club, 4-1, in the Red and Gray bailiwick on Thursday.

Today P. A. A. encounters University Club in a tussle abroad, while Keystone likewise travels and in so doing encounters the Pittsburgh Golf Club delegation, at present reposing in third place half-a-game to the rear of the leaders.

Allegheny Country Club remains idle over the week-end, while the Class B loop wound up festivities last Saturday as P. A. A. whitewashed K. A. C. to nose out Edgeworth for final honors.

FOUR SOCCER TILTS TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

A couple of league and two exhibition games mark this afternoon's local soccer card. The feature game naturally will be the Pittsburgh Rovers-Clan Douglas session, scheduled for Leslie Park.

Douglas is still counted by many to be in the running for the Central League title, but the league, by refusing the Douglas-Westinghouse protest, has unofficially given the pennant to the Swissvale crowd.

At Swissvale, Union Switch meets Westinghouse in a friendly affair, and at Ambridge, East Pittsburgh meets Bridge Works. In the Panhandle loop, Houston has the Grove A. C. as its opposition, it being a junior affair.

The Central League protest is causing a lot of bad blood in soccer circles. If the West Penn appeals committee has the appeal, it should have lost no time in getting it out of the way. The sympathy of soccer fans is going to the Switch team.

Tomorrow, the Akron Goodyears, national amateur champions, will be here to tangle with the Morrys in the semi-final round of the National Amateur Cup. This game will be played at South Park and should draw a capacity crowd. The Goodyears are coming by bus from Akron tomorrow. The kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 p. m.

JACOBS NOT REINSTATED

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—An emergency meeting of the New York State Athletic Commission has failed to clear up the status of Joe Jacobs, suspended manager of Max Schmeling, world heavyweight champion.

Chairman James A. Farley and Commissioner John Phelan made a special trip to Post Graduate Hospital to confer with William Muldoon, senior member of the commission, but they reached no decision on Jacobs' request for reinstatement.

Muldoon has been in the hospital several weeks recovering from a minor operation. He expected to be discharged today.

Jacobs was suspended with Schmeling more than a year ago for failure to give Jack Sharkey a return bout for the championship. As Schmeling and Sharkey have signed for a bout here in June and posted the necessary forfeits, it is believed the commission will restore Jacobs to good standing.

Battling Gizzy Ill With Flu In Detroit

DETROIT, Feb. 6.—Battling Gizzy, Pittsburgh fighter, who was scheduled to meet Eddie Lord, of Cleveland, in a 10-rounder here last night, is ill in his room in the Teller Hotel here, following an unexpected attack of influenza shortly after weighing-in yesterday afternoon. Last night, he was suffering with a temperature of 104, according to Dr. George W. Palm, the commission physician. Gizzy will be confined to his hotel here for at least two days, the doctor said.

Tommy Paul, Buffalo, won a 10-round decision over Pete DeGrasse, New York, here last night in the main bout, and Lord, 132, defeated Eddie Koppy, 135, Detroit, who subbed for Gizzy.

DATES ARE SET BY U. S. L. T. A.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association today recommended to the association's annual convention that all major championship tournaments for 1932 be returned to the clubs that entertained them last year, except the national clay courts play, which will go to Memphis, Tenn.

Approval of the places and dates on the convention floor appeared as mere routine, with delegates showing more interest in the vote on national rankings for 1931 and a promised contest over the election of national officers.

The Memphis tournament, bringing the event into the South for the first time, will open the "big circuit" June 6-11.

SAME CLUBS

Following tradition, the West Side Tennis Club, of Forest Hills, N. Y., will be host to the women's singles championship, August 15-20, and the men's and veterans' singles, August 22-27. The national doubles will be played at Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hills, Mass.

Other tournament dates include the National Intercollegiate, Merion Cricket Club, Haverford, Pa., June 20-25; Public Parks Championships, Louisville, Ky., August 15-20, and the following junior events:

Girls' hard court championships, Berkeley Tennis Club, Berkeley, Cal., June 6-11; junior and boys' championships, Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., August 8-13; Girls' grass court championships, Philadelphia Cricket Club, St. Martin's, Pa., September 5-10; junior and boys' indoor, place not decided, December 26-January 1; girls' indoor, Longwood covered courts, Chestnut Hills, Mass., Dec. 26-31.

MEN'S INDOOR MARCH 11-18

The 1933 men's indoor will be played March 11-18 at the Seventh Regiment Tennis Club, New York, and the women's indoor March 27-April 1, at the Longwood covered courts.

The U. S. L. T. A. convention in assembling today was expected to vote through with little or no discussion the recommendation of Capt. Samuel Hardy, of last year's Davis Cup team, that the 1932 cup-seekers go direct to France for the interzone final, eliminating play at Wimbledon, because of the danger of a post-Wimbledon let-down and the difference in the Wimbledon and French surfaces.

REGIONAL COAL PACT OPPOSED BY U. S.

Justice Department Sees Anti-Trust Violation; Kelly Raps Foes of Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Any attempt to put regional sales agreements among bituminous coal operators into operation will be opposed by the Department of Justice as a violation of the anti-trust laws.

Attorneys representing groups of operators in the Pittsburgh and other coal producing areas were so informed yesterday by department officials. They were told they would face a court suit if the group selling plan, already in process of formation, is made effective.

Specific congressional authority to waive the anti-trust laws, officials of Attorney General Mitchell's office said, is necessary for the institution of a co-operative trade agreement to regulate production and price of coal such as is proposed.

KELLY ASSAILS FOES

Meanwhile Representative Kelly, of Edgewood, co-sponsor of the Davis-Kelly bill to permit such acts in the industry, assailed operators in the industry who already have registered disapproval of the measure, as practicing "obstructive tactics."

Two of the leading Pennsylvania operators, J. A. D. Morrow and Harry F. Bovard, urged the state's Republican House delegation Thursday to oppose the bills. Specific criticism was directed by the two at the provisions requiring licensure of all operators and permitting unionization activities by mine unions in open or non-union mining regions.

Agreements in the various regions for the rate of production and the sale price of the product—the prime purpose of the bill—would be legal only with the approval of a proposed coal commission which would have the right to call in the public to determine whether the agreement would be in the public interest.

OFFICIAL RAPS PLANS

Under the projected operators' plan, such agreements would be adopted through voluntary action of the operators without any other supervision.

That plan was described by an official of the Justice Department as "if not illegal so close to it" that the department would be compelled to act.

The operators' attorneys sought an agreement with the Justice Department whereby a "friendly" suit would be instituted to test the legality of the proposed combinations.

They were told the government could not make any such promise, but would urge expedition of disposition of litigation if the plan was placed in effect.

A spokesman for the department said it "is not ignorant of the demoralized state of the coal industry," but could make no exceptions to its general rule of process in anti-trust suits.

Cold, Hunger Kill Two Penna. Men

HARRISBURG, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Cold and hunger took two lives in Pennsylvania yesterday. Paul Heberchik, of New Columbus, dropped dead while eating an orange he had reclaimed from the city dump, where he had been finding his food since he lost his job several weeks ago. A hermit who lived in a hut near York also dropped dead as he was about to eat a breakfast prepared for him by Mrs. Joseph Hofstetter in Hanover. He was driven from his backwoods hovel by the cold.

H. Henley, his assistant.

NAGEL REVEALS FILM WORLD'S RELIEF PLAN

Star, Social Student, Tells Methods Here; Deplores Handicap to Individuality

Mass production and mass selling that he declared keep the "white collar" class from developing individuality by confining them to the role of clerks was scored today by Conrad Nagel, the romantic screen star whose hobby is social study.

president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund that cares for the studio and screen workers, of whose ranks of 25,000 only about 8,000 are employed. Between performances at Loew's Penn Theater, where he opened a week's engagement yesterday, Nagel explained the system of the industry's relief work. Expressing belief that the system is practical for adoption by municipality with only slight changing, he said:

"The relief fund is perpetual. Realizing the difficulties that arise in seeking subscriptions and pledges from workers, we sought a method that lightens the fulfilment of payments and yet saves half the work of collecting. Everyone connected in the industry from the studio worker to the star is pledged to give one-half of 1 per cent of their weekly salaries. No subscriptions are sought from those earning less than $50. This means 25 cents a week from the smallest salary.

"No social workers investigate cases. A committee of 50 women carry on this duty and represent all classes of workers. If a cameraman needs relief, a cameraman's wife investigates and makes recommendations as she sees and understands the needs of this type of family. The same policy is followed for all classes of workers. The funds are collected from the employers, who deduct the weekly donations from the pay checks."

MOVIE COMEBACK :-: Absence Makes Actress Fonder of Movies :-: IN THE THEATERS :-: Critics Have Their Say About the Talkies

Anna Q. Nilsson, 30 Pounds Lighter, to Return To Talk Screen

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.

After four years, Anna Q. Nilsson is coming back.

Feeling fit and 30 pounds lighter than on her return from Europe, the Swedish star will make tests next week at several major studios. She says she can't bear to be away from the cameras any longer.

"How little these people know," she declares, "who object to being stopped for autographs and for talks over the microphone. Let them lose this for a while and they'd realize how much it means to them.

"These days, I can walk down Hollywood boulevard and not be recognized by anyone. But do I like the privacy? I don't. It only makes me realize how fleeting fame is."

Anna Q. Nilsson

Anna's story, during the last few years, is one of many obstacles overcome. Injured by a fall from a horse, she was off the screen for many months. Then she tried to come back too soon. The result was one picture, "The Blockade," followed by a relapse.

It wasn't until her return from Europe last year that she thought again of making a comeback. By this time slim figures were at the height of their vogue. Anna decided to take off 30 pounds. To do this she went on a starvation diet and was stricken with pneumonia. During her illness, and Hollywood hasn't heard this until now, she spent five weeks at a hospital under an assumed name.

But today all that is forgotten. Under the guidance of Freddie Frelich, who has managed her career for years, she's ready for the adventure of the talkies.

SOME GOSSIP

Hollywood understands that "BH" Rogers, brother of Buddy, is reconciled with his pretty young wife . . . Johnny Farrow telephoned Lila Lee from London the other day, but the romance is still cold . . . Saw Helen Twelvetrees looking very smart in a white leather jacket with fur collar. Something new, or am I way behind in styles? . . . Lupe Velez is almost recovered from her pleurisy attack. She tells me she hasn't a romance to her name, and, of all things, is devoting her time to making hook rugs . . . When everything else palls, Jack Oakie says he's going to have fun loaning his four agents out . . . You'll find Homer Croy's "Headed for Hollywood" an amusing story about an Iowa beauty-contest winner who brings her family to chaperon her on her way to stardom. Papa is a former medicine-show proprietor and there's an Indian chief who can't get acclimated to Hollywood ways.

LAURA STEPS OUT

Packed with her brief flyer on the local stage, Laura La Plante is leaving today for Seattle where she will take the lead in a stock company presentation of "The Unexpected Husband." If she likes it, and Seattle likes her, she may remain there to do another play. Husband Bill Seiter will stay home and tend to the movies.

Soldiers on Parade in Metro

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Emperor Hirohito, of Japan, is shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, being presented in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters, reviewing an army of 15,000 troops, many of whom are now in the fighting zone. The soldiers, armed to the teeth, march in their battlefield uniforms with bayonets flashing in the sun. Animated maps, scenes in China and a graphic description by the Globe Trotter, vividly depict the situation in the Sino-Japanese conflict as it exists today. The symposium ends with pictures of the transport Chaumont, showing it on its way from Manila loaded with 1,000 men of the 31st Infantry, and Marines.

The two-billion dollar Reconstruction Finance Corporation is shown as it begins its existence with the swearing in of the members at Washington. Chairman Eugene Meyer introduces the various members, including former Ambassador Dawes, and explains how the corporation proposes to operate.

MANY NATIONS

The first autogiro with a cabin ever flown is shown giving its initial test at the Hanworth airport near London.

Representatives of 17 nations, each displaying their flags, participate in a colorful ceremony attending the opening of the winter Olympics at Lake Placid. Among other exhibitions of skill, is a demonstration by Phil Taylor, British stilt skater.

Mother love extends to giraffes, too. In the Berlin (Germany) Zoo, the only baby giraffe to be born in captivity in 22 years, is shown a few days after its arrival. A keeper who attempts to caress the baby is almost assassinated by the loving mother.

BEAUTY CONTEST

The American Beauty Congress holds its annual convention in New York City and the nation's fairest girls parade before the judges.

An unusual picture of kid radio stars comes from a studio in Los Angeles, where Neverly Jane Dixon, 4 years old, sings of her love to Allen Zeller, who is the same age.

Salesman Enjoined By Creamery Firm

The Corliss Creamery Company obtained a preliminary injunction from Judge A. B. Reid in Common Pleas Court to restrain Henry Leebove, a former salesman, from engaging in the butter and eggs trade in Wilkinsburg, East Pittsburgh, Braddock and adjacent territory, where his route for the company was alleged to have been.

He was employed by the Corliss company September 16, 1930, under an agreement not to engage in the trade in his territory for six months after leaving the company's employ and since leaving January 30 he has engaged in the trade, the suit averred.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

ABOARD S. S. EUROPA, Feb. 6.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

This is just a little note to "Uncle Andy" Mellon, the first man to step down in order to take the ambassadorship to Great Britain. Mr. Mellon, you saved us taxes, and you made us money, and we, like a lot of "saps," went and blew it in. When it was all gone, we took it out on you.

The thing busted in your face the same as it did in ours. This is a crisis where the bigger you were, the harder you fell. We are mighty poor losers if we can't remember what you did and thank you, and wish you well; so goodbye, Andy—take care of yourself.

If you put on knee breeches, be sure and put on long woolens underneath, and always remember if we had saved what you saved for us we wouldn't need saving now.

Yours, WILL.

Parade!

John Gilbert and Claire McDowell appear in "The Big Parade," now showing with sound in the Sheridan Square.

Cats Are Aid In Warner

Charlie Chan, slant-eyed sleuth, solves another murder mystery in the Warner. This time he is aided and abetted by a couple of cats.

Chan's latest adventures are presented in "Charlie Chan's Chance," new film in the Warner. And again it is Warner Oland in the title part. Oland has been doing the Oriental act in Hollywood for so long that he is liable to be deported as an alien.

Anyway, the new film is a good mystery because even the director doesn't seem to know what it is all about. Murder is done and the clues spread out like sparks from a dying skyrocket. Which baffles audiences as well as Mr. Chan. However, smart work on the part of the cast, especially Mr. Oland, makes it interesting, if bewildering entertainment.

It begins with a prominent man sitting dead in his library. Heart failure says the doctor. But Mr. Chan knows better. Those all-seeing eyes of his spy a dead cat under a chair. And that Oriental nose of his senses gas. His verdict is murder.

A couple of reels later another cat enters and saves the life of our heroic sleuth.

The setting of the film is New York. The supporting cast includes H. B. Warner, Marian Nixon, Linda Watkins and Alexander Kirkland.

It is the subtle philosophy of Mr. Chan that makes his screen adventures so amusing. But his proverbs are losing their Oriental tang.

Love Kicked About in Stanley

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

This thing called love gets kicked around like a football in "Forbidden," new Stanley film. It is all about a girl who loves a married man. And that man doesn't happen to be her husband.

Nothing very original, you say. Granted. But here's a film that demonstrates it doesn't take originality to make entertaining drama.

Barbara Stanwyck is starred. She's quite the emotional lady. Yet, there is an air of reserve in her acting that is in good taste.

Spring is all about when the picture opens and Miss Stanwyck tosses away her spectacles, draws her life savings from the bank and splurges on a Havana vacation.

Two men enter her life. One is the suave Adolphe Menjou, a married man in hero garb. The other is Ralph Bellamy, peanut-eating reporter. On the side-lines of romance these two gentlemen stage a battle of wits.

Menjou is a district attorney, with eyes on the governor's chair. Bellamy is out to see that he doesn't get it. But even he is surprised when he discovers that the "skeleton" in the D. A.'s household is a baby.

From here on the story travels down through the years with Miss Stanwyck growing older and sadder.

Frank Capra, who directed, also is responsible for the story. He gets in a number of Hollywood's stock-in-trade situations and outdoes an O. Henry when it comes to coincidence. But he has given the production some neat directorial touches.

Ted (Is Everybody Happy) Lewis is on the stage. That sentimental note in his voice certainly "wows" audiences. Mr. Lewis has his band along and numerous other entertainers also appear. But he is a show in himself.

ACTOR PLUNGES TO DEATH

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Frank A. Tannehill, 70, actor and native of Grand Rapids, Mich., was killed yesterday when he fell or jumped from the solarium on the twelfth floor of Elks Lodge No. 1, in West Forty-third street.

Arthur McAvoy, manager of the building, told police Tannehill had been out of employment for some time but did not seem greatly concerned about it.

In the dead man's pockets was found a note:

"In case of accident or death, please notify Henry Phillips, of Elks Lodge No. 1."

Coll Revenge Seen In N. Y. Slaying

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The body of Harry Gershowitz, 30, was found on an upper West Side street, near Riverside drive, last night. He had been shot through the heart and neck. Marks on the body indicated it had been tossed from an automobile.

Detectives expressed the opinion he may have been slain in reprisal for the killing of two Vincent Coll gangsters in a Bronx apartment Monday night.

Plays, Players, By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Monday an Alvin audience will be seeing its first show in several weeks, "Experience Unnecessary," fourth in the Professional Players list. It features Verree Teasdale and Walter Woolf.

Small Timer says fish may be brain food, but asks why they get caught if they are so strong in that element.

"The Band Wagon," coming Monday to the Nixon, was for months a popular revue on Broadway. It has its original stars, Fred and Adele Astaire, Helen Frederick and Frank Morgan.

Small Timer says one never loses by being courteous, but a toupee-wearer will still be cautious on a windy day.

The Enright will have Dick Powell back as master of cermonies today, when a new bill opens with a stage show and Linda Watkins, in "Good Sport," on the screen.

* * *

Small Timer says the stops on a saxophone should be within reach of hearers.

"The Big Parade," with sound, is undergoing screen revival and will be on the Sheridan Square screen today. "Ebony Follies" will head the stage acts.

Small Timer says another example of dead language is the sentence—"give me the check."

In the Harris today the new screen bill will feature Ricardo Cortez in "Men of Chance." Huber, magician, will head the vaudeville with a trunk mystery and other illusions.

Small Timer says that, regardless of proverbs, many former choosers are now beggars.

"The Servant in the House" will have a novel presentation in Carnegie Music Hall Monday night. All parts will be played by Philadelphia Rice, who calls himself a monjector.

Sport!

Linda Watkins has the title role in "Good Sport," picture showing in both the Davis and the Enright.

'Good Sport' On Screen

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Good Sport," gin-drinking comedy-drama of modern matrimonial seas, is the new film in both the Davis and Enright. It is about a young wife, who goes out into the night clubs to see what it is that keeps husbands busy.

Linda Watkins is featured. She learns her husband is stricken with a blonde, so when he's away in Europe she steps around with his fast friends and becomes known as the "good sport."

Incidentally, John Boles looms across the gay night horizon and the young wife falls for him in that big way.

Eventually, the husband is written out of the scenario and 'tis happiness for Linda and John.

Miss Watkins, of serious mien and halting voice, has a certain charm that helps things considerable. Greta Nissen also arouses interest as the blonde lady. The film isn't so much.

Peace Victory! Delegates Talk One at a Time

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Some more delicate details from our keyhole astronomer at Geneva:

The League is electing vice presidents. That's the last gasp of the diving gladiator.

Japanese delegate made beautiful speech for peace before packing to join the army.

The representative from Putrida wants the next peace conference held on a bobsled on the zig zag turn.

The Kitcho-Moppian delegate claims victory for peace because the boys are speaking one at a time.

Hour's recess granted to enable delegates to listen to Floyd Gibbons' broadcast of Shanghai battle.

The three Kennedy brothers, who are fighting Bolivia would like to send a brother to Geneva, but they can't spare him.

The Chinese delegates have given up their first floor seats and are defending the second balcony.

More sandbags were piled around the chairman's desk last night. He is worried because the Dizzian diplomat said:

"Mr. Chairman, considering the object of this gathering, don't you think it would be a good idea to leave your gavel home?"

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a dull, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

Conrad Nagel Is Himself In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

They have two film heroes in the Penn this week—Conrad Nagel in person and Chester Morris in the picture "Corsair." Nagel, who has always had the fame of being one of the nicest and cleanest fellows on the lot, also was revealed as one of the cleverest. His act tells and shows something of the way things are done in Hollywood. Ruth Marsh comes in as a stagestruck maiden from the East, who finds everything and everybody "adorable." After the amusing skit a scene from "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is shown in the making.

George Seibel

"Corsair" is an exciting adventure film of football, Wall street and hijackers of the rum fleet. Chester Morris, as the hero, is kissed by Alison Loyd, daughter of the Wall street pirate, and both daughter and father always get what they want. Still she doesn't get Chester until he has beaten her father at his own game, and even extracted an $85,000 check—which he tears up, probably knowing that it could be stopped anyway.

There are some very fine sea and cloud effects. Alison wears some attractive gowns, and the melodrama isn't overdone very much. Thrills, heart-throbs and fine seascapes—the picture ought to please.

The Lucky 7 Trio did some dashing foot-work. Flo Mayo is a graceful performer in the air. William and Joe Mandel almost break their necks in fun, and the final "Spader and Fly" effect, with Miles and Kover, is most picturesque.

INSURANCE MEN NAME SPEAKER

MACHADO AIDS QUAKE VICTIMS

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Feb. 6.—(AP)—President Machado has contributed $10,000 for the relief of those who suffered in the recent earthquake here. The official death list has risen to 13, and police are still searching the ruins for bodies.

Public Works Secretary Ernesto Onetti put 70 men to clearing away the debris about the sorely-needed Municipal Hospital to determine if its reconstruction is feasible.

Two bread lines were established, and $1,000 of $10,000 appropriated by the central government for relief measures arrived. Mayor Desiderio Arnaz was chosen to head the municipal relief committee.

It was by the sea
And there were moonlight and stars;
The music floated faintly to them
From the terrace above through the perfumed air
Heavy with the scent of late roses; it was a waltz,
Languidly sensuous, mysterious,
And as they sat at the little table in the garden
The flickering table light
Made shadowy pools of her eyes; her bare shoulders,
Pale ivory in the half-light, bewitching, maddening,
The ancient lure—playing havoc with his thoughts;
Suddenly he spoke; 'Gee, they gotta lotta noive
'Soaking a buck for highballs and they got no show!'
'Yeah,' she replied, 'you said it, bay-bee!'

The Big Echo!

It is not our plan to prosecute or persecute Mr. Carroll because he said that we were not fit to associate with decent people. But this fact simply has to be recorded. Carroll himself was the target for the same crack, and it reddened his face two summers ago on the New Amsterdam stage, where his "Vanities" was playing and which had just been raided by the police.

Fred Stone was rehearsing his cast in "Ripples" on the same Dillingham platform that day when Carroll happened in. Carroll went over to Mr. Stone and offered his hand.

"I'm Earl Carroll," he said. "I'm glad to meet you."

Fred Stone spurned Carroll's paw and denounced Earl before the entire "Ripples" company.

"I don't want to know you!" cried Stone. "I don't want you on the same stage with me or my daughters. You are not fit to associate with decent people!"

Author! Author! Author!

Post-Mortem

Benjamin Holzman, one of the Times square guys, now signs his letter like this:

"B. Holzman, who'll match his life with anyone's at the Central Park Casino!"

Deadly Parallel

A confrere yesterday reported: "Earl Carroll chuckled at those stories which had him crying."

And Mr. Carroll's defender quoted the producer as saying: "I never enjoyed anything so much."

Sime's current theatrical weekly includes among other advertisements the same confrere's announcement of his broadcast for next Tuesday. The guest star, it says, will be Earl Carroll.

Catch on?

The Comeback Horrible!

The other day Lou Holtz received a letter asking for the modest sum of $10,000 as a loan. Lou, who is a target for this gag, sent his formal reply:

"I shall indeed be very glad to accommodate you. As you realize this is a business proposition, I shall have to ask you for the loan of your right eye as security."

The next week the guy showed up at the Friars Club to see Holtz—with a glass eye!

Oop!

Louis A. Cuvillier, dean of the State Assembly, stated on the floor last week that Seabury is playing politics endeavoring to popularize himself for Fusion candidate for Mayor of New York next year.

The Assemblyman is a little hack in his lessons. There is a provision in the city charter which states that a man must be a voter in the city for 10 consecutive years to be eligible to be a candidate for Mayor.

Seabury for several years has been an enrolled voter in East Hampton, L. I.

It Happened!

Alf Friedman heard it in one of the smaller broadcasting studios. A banjoist was doing his strumming before a mike when suddenly an announcer rushed in and whispered:

"Stop playing. I've got to put on an 'SOS'!"

"Oh, no!" snapped the banjoist. "You're not gonna do any advertising on my program!"

Quiteso, Quiteso

Charles Leonard Fletcher, the golf editor of the Hollywood Citizen-News, relays this eavesdropped repartee heard on a golf course:

"I'll play you 5—5—5."

"Too much money."

"Aw, come on! Remember—coffins have no pockets!"

Girls Want More in a Man Than Mere Goodness

Do girls like 'em Wild 'n' Woolly, Rough 'n' Tough?
And has a Decent Chap no chance with a modern gal?
V. D. C. thinks they do—and he hasn't.
According to him, all Popular Heroes must be "Worldly Wise" . . . whatever that may be.

And it has V. D. G. down
For he'd like to have ideals
He'd like to be the Good Boy his mother told him to be when he left the Little Town for the Big City—

But . . . can he . . . and still win the ladies?

Listen in—then tell him, girls. How do you like your Boy Friends—tough or tender?

"Miss Martin:

"I want to ask you a question. I think it is one that is important to many people besides myself, so I hope you will answer it.

"How can a fellow be decent and yet be the man of experience that most women seem to look for and desire?

"I have known it to be a fact that even decent girls prefer the man of experience to the man without any. From time to time you may hear of some particular woman who is looking for a decent chap. But nine times out of ten, if she has the chance, she would pass him up for one of the world-wise kind. Some fellow who has been around and seen things and knows what he is saying is.

IS PUZZLED

"I have been de[ceived] in life, and I would like to be so but from the things it won't be for me now.

"This business of love is rather a puzzling thing sometimes. You are told that girls have ideals, and then you find it seems to want them. [Then] it's me going and I think [you] have a lot of other young fellows going too.

I hope so, will try to explain it to me.

V. D. G."

How can you be decent and sin—be worldly wise.

That's easy, son. I guess you get the wrong idea about what worldly wise means.

It's natural isn't it for a girl to prefer a chap who knows his way around. There's no [fun] in [dating] a fellow who doesn't know what it's all about. [Girls] want adventure.

[Any] girl wants a man who is a good man. But [she] wants him to also be around and seen things and knows what he is saying.

Most men are decent at heart, and they want [a] clean and interesting [girl] for a wife. They want adventure. They want [to] be with a man of experience, but they want him to be a good man.

[Many] girls want a man who is a bit worldly wise, but they want him to be worldly wise in the right way.

[Most] men are like that. They want [a] man who is experienced in life, but they want him to be a man who is clean and decent.

CHAPTER III.

It was a glorious day. Lily Lou savored its sweetness even before she opened her eyes. She lay still, lips faintly smiling. She was remembering last night.

Last night she went riding in Ken Sargent's green car. Nothing happened. Just a ride. A choc malt in a candy shop. They didn't even talk very much. Just sat, side by side. Part of the time he slipped an arm around her, drove with one hand. Once he slowed up, and leaning over, suddenly, kissed her.

"Mind?" he asked, laughing softly.

"Course not," she had answered lightly.

What's a kiss? Would she tell him that pain like fire shot all through her, that her stomach almost turned over inside her? Not Lily Lou.

"If I'm crazy enough to get thrilled just because a boy kisses me, I'm not going to let on, anyway," she thought, still lying there in bed, with her eyes shut.

FIRST REAL KISS

It was the first time a boy had kissed her—really kissed her. The little pecks from the boys back home didn't count. Lily Lou felt the thrill shoot through her again. Did girls always feel this way about kisses? Did May and Bess when Raymond and Verner . . .

The thought of her sisters and their unromantic husbands spoiled it a bit.

Lily Lou wrinkled her nose and sat up, chasing dreams and attendant realities away.

Anyway, it was time to get up. She wanted lots of time to dress. No use in looking any more like a frump than you have to.

May and Raymond were just finishing breakfast when she came into the kitchen, hatted, coated, her purse with a new sport handkerchief perking out of it, all ready to leave.

"Hello—you're early," May said good naturedly. It was characteristic of the Lansings that there was no reference to last night's quarrel. Neither May nor Lily Lou was capable of holding a grievance.

"The early bird," Raymond observed, pushing coffee cup aside, lighting a cigaret. "Out to catch a worm?"

"Out to catch a train," Lily Lou smiled. "I'm tired of running for it."

ENVIED OTHER GIRLS

May, stacking dishes at the sink, flashed a knowing look at the younger girl. Saw the starry eyes, the ripe, bowed lips, hair burnished with brushing, best blouse, new gloves . . .

"Well, come on, Raymond," she said, "or we'll be late."

Lily Lou finished her coffee and toast leisurely. Looked at herself approvingly in the little mirror over the mantel in the dining room. "There's no use in getting to work looking like a fright," she thought, adding a little more lip salve.

Ken always tried to save the seat next to his on the train. If someone else wedged in beside him, Lily Lou took a seat ahead, so that he could see her. Then she would pretend to be absorbed in her magazine, or in looking out the window. "It doesn't make the least bit of difference where I sit," her indifferent back said. And she laughed inside, because she knew that Ken was fidgeting, wishing he could get out and come and stand beside her, and not quite daring to, because of what the other commuters would think.

Oh, the other commuters were thinking plenty. Lily Lou knew that. She felt half embarrassed, half proud, tingly all over when she thought about it.

Many the time she had watched some couple, always together, and envied the girl a little . . . And after a while the man had commuted alone and some of the gossipy commuters said they were married . . .

ANYWAY, A TRICK

Not that the commuters would have the chance to ever say that about her and Ken. She might be crazy enough to be thrilled by his attention, but thank goodness she had sense enough to know that it didn't mean anything.

Besides, there was her career, her music.

For the first time in weeks Lily Lou felt thrilled about her singing. She talked about it to Ken, on the boat. "You know, I did an awful thing last night. I didn't tell you, but I went off and left my poor accompanist to go home disappointed. It was a mean trick—"

"Darn nice trick!"

Lily Lou smiled too. She loved the way Ken laughed. He had nice even white teeth. "But he isn't really so good looking," she thought, critically. "He has just plain browny hair, and his eyes aren't any particular color—just sort of blue-gray, and he has quite a few freckles, and not very handsome features, but, oh, dear, he's so—distinguished!" Distinguished wasn't quite the word—that wasn't it. But looking at Ken, you'd know that he'd had everything all his life, that he had a name that meant something, that he wouldn't be shy about big restaurants and hotels and he'd know which were the good plays and he'd know important looking people . . . "Not that that matters," Lily Lou said to herself, hastily. "It matters to his kind of people of course—but it won't matter to me. Because people like Ken, that know how to do things, and have eight-cylinder cars, are going to pay to hear me sing some day!"

And somehow, thinking of Ken, and his big car, made her eager to show him—the world—everybody—what she could do.

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing, just 20 and pretty, is studying for an operatic career, but dreams of romance. One morning she meets wealthy Ken Sargent, who used to spend his summers in her home town. He is attracted by her beauty. Lily Lou's sister, May, with whom she boards, objects to Ken, calling his family "snobs."

Now Go On

She wished that she didn't have to work. If she just had more time to practice . . . more money for French, Italian lessons—oh, so many things she should be studying . . .

"Want to go for a ride again tonight?" Ken asked just before they parted at Market and Sansome.

"Heaven's no! I've got to practice!"

"Practice some other time," he teased. "I'll be around at 8. That will give you plenty of time. S'long."

For an instant Lily Lou stared, her mouth slightly open. She couldn't believe it. It was the first time anyone had ever dared to make light of her music. Quick anger took her. "Certainly not! My music comes first—always," she called after him, spiritedly.

He turned on his heel, came back. "Aw, Lily Lou. There's a moon tonight, and it's such marvelous weather. And besides, I'll be busy myself, lots of nights. Come on, come tonight. Be a sport. Maybe you'd rather go dancing. Would you rather go dancing? Or to a show, Lily Lou? Is 8 too early?"

IS ANGERED

Somehow, that just made Lily Lou madder. "It isn't where we go. Ride—dance—what difference does that make? It's my music that counts. I've got to study. It's my life—Oh, Ken—don't you see?"

"Yes, I see," he said slowly. He saw it all too clearly. Her fierce ambition . . . "You haven't time for me. All right!" He grinned, put the cap he had been holding in his hand back on his head, turned away.

Lily Lou gulped.

"Good-bye!" she called after him brightly.

She walked on to work. Walked to the offices of Fox, Johansen and Durney, attorneys at law. She was the switchboard operator. It wasn't very interesting work, and it didn't pay very well. She had chosen it deliberately, because it gave her time to study during the quiet hours.

Today there was little to do. She learned the words of an Italian song. Read through the score of Manon. She wouldn't let Ken come into her mind. She could hardly wait to get home, to practice.

Scales tonight. Exercises. Careful, hard, exacting work.

In the dining room, stretched out on the couch, May lay, listening. It was Raymond's night for lodge.

Raymond's sister Irene came over. She had with her some silk that she wanted May to help her cut.

From her place at the piano in the front room Lily Lou heard them talking . . . May's bored "Of course . . . Yes, I think you did tell me . . . mmm . . . wasn't that nice?" Irene's simpering chatter. "He said . . . swell fellow . . . I nearly died . . . awful crush on me . . . We're not really engaged, but he said . . ."

MIND WANDERS

Lily Lou went on with her exercises. "Silly thing!" she thought resentfully, "always imagining she's engaged."

Up and down the scale her voice color, limpid. . . But she couldn't keep her mind on it, after all.

She reached for the Butterfly score . . . the "waiting theme." She thought of Butterfly waiting, for the lover who would never come back any more . . . and loneliness seemed to ooze out of the very walls and settle on her, in a fog of pain . . .

"Un bel dì vedremo . . ."

"Some day he'll come," she sang, her voice rich with emotion.

"Gee, Lily Lou can sure sing," Irene said. She dashed a sentimental tear out of her eye. She had weak, pale blue eyes, and was always wiping her glasses.

"She does pretty well. She'd do better if she had more time to study," May said seriously.

But she stirred uneasily, sighed a little as she tried to concentrate on the pattern for Irene's stepin. Lily Lou's scales were all right, but she didn't like the Butterfly number. It had a little too much feeling in it. Time for all that later . . . much later . . . What mattered now was study, technique.

"Papa said she went out with a fellow last night. He SAID it was Kentfield Sargent," Irene's pale eyes were glittering behind the glasses.

Lily Lou's voice sang on. She had got beyond the "waiting theme" now, and the score was strange to her. She ought to stop before she hits a false note and May shouted "You're off key!"

But she couldn't stop. Because if she did she'd weaken and call Ken on the telephone.

Continued Monday.

Lily Lou took a seat ahead, so that Ken could see her.

ALL IN A DAY — By MARK HELLINGER

Fear

FUNNY HOW the conversation ever got around to such a topic. We were sitting in the living room of a home that belongs to a well known book publisher. It may surprise you to learn that a few book publishers still have homes, but such is the case, nevertheless. And, as usual, I was sitting on a sofa and talking of nothing in particular.

My companion was a writer, and a decidedly interesting conversationalist. So engrossing was he, in fact, that I was more than willing to sit with him while the rest of the guests were getting black and blue marks from trying to edge up to the bar. It goes without saying, then, that I was enjoying myself.

Oh, yes. I know how we got around to the topic. Earlier in the evening one of the women had said that she was dreadfully afraid of dreams. What she meant by that, she said, was that she remembered a dream very vividly and that it remained on her mind for a long, long time. It wasn't superstition with her, she pointed out; it was more the fear of a memory.

Funny thing about that woman was the way I recall the author's opening remark on the subject. She carries within her a fear that she cannot possibly suppress. She's very thin and very nervous, and that's unquestionably due to lack of sleep. The fear of a dream to come doesn't permit her to get the proper rest."

I nodded. I do that very well.

"Yes," I agreed, "it is a most unusual case. And you can't quite figure out the real reasons behind cases such as that because well, there just doesn't seem to be any explanation. I think . . ."

He interrupted me.

"You're wrong there," he asserted quietly. "If you'll go deeply enough into a person's life you'll always find a definite reason for any strange quirks that the individual might evidence. Sometimes, it is hereditary, but not very often.

"In most cases you can trace the fear or the obsession back to an episode in the early childhood of the person in question. Not only to childhood many times, but to absolute babyhood. A fall, a sudden awakening, a rude shock will impress itself beyond all belief on the child's mind. And as the child grows, that obsession develops without the boy or girl knowing the exact reason why. It's only when you speak to them again and again, and urge them to remember, that they finally come through.

"If you'd be interested," he said suddenly, "I can tell you one of the strangest stories I ever heard along those lines. And, as long as we're on the subject, I'll pass it along to you. Maybe you can use it some day.

"To start the story as you might do it, we'll call the man George. He was well over six feet tall and he had the kind of a build you read about in books. An athlete since his public school days he went through high school and college as an expert participant in all the major sports.

"Brave? Say, Mark, you'd never want to meet a man who had any more bravery in his makeup. On a football field George was absolutely fearless. He'd fight anybody at any time, and I'll swear that there wasn't a man in the world that George feared.

"When the war rolled around, that was his gravy. They still talk of the day that he waded through Belleau Wood with three bullets in his thigh and a buddy on his back. He returned with enough medals and decorations to start his own pawnshop. And, to show you the type of man he was, I don't think he ever wore them a second time."

The writer smiled.

"And now," he continued, "we come to the hitch. George had a secret fear that was known only to his intimate associates. And it was a fear that would transform him suddenly into the strangest type of psychologic antithesis. The man was afraid of lightning.

"I cannot describe that fear in mere words. Enough to tell you that he dreaded lightning with all the intensity that he expended on his heroic deeds. And, as always, there was a reason for that fear.

"In his early youth—he was little more than a baby when it happened—George saw his older brother killed by a shaft of lightning. The impression of that terrible sight had never left his mind. As he grew the dread of lightning grew with him. He could never surmount the fear of that one thing.

"The ablest doctors were of no avail. They worked with the child and they tried to do away with the obsession that he, too, would some day die of lightning. They did their very best but it was no use. Whenever the heavens thundered, George would bolt himself in an inner room and sit there quivering until the deluge ceased. For all his bravery, he was some little schoolgirl in that situation.

"Of course, as the years went on, the fear abated somewhat. He tried to overcome it by sheer will power. He tried to fight it via the adventure route, by explorations and things like that. But he could never quite achieve the result that he wanted. During the war, cannon fire and sudden flares had no effect on him. It was only an electrical storm that made his buddies think he was suddenly ill.

"Well, sir, it wasn't so long ago that George returned from a hunting trip in the interior of India. The man was the picture of rugged health. And he confided to one of his friends—the man who told me the story, incidentally, that he thought he had at last conquered his unreasonable fear. He said the years were finally doing the trick, and that the dread of lightning was finally leaving him."

Once more the author paused, I was almost impolite enough to urge him to continue. But he spared me the trouble.

"Two days after his arrival in New York," he said, "George went for a short stroll in the park. He saw a dog jumping about in the grass. George whistled; probably the same as you or I would have done. The dog neared him, and George put out his hand in confident fashion.

"I don't think he noticed anything peculiar about the dog's eyes, or whether he saw an unnatural foam on the animal's jaws. If he did, it was too late. The dog leaped at George's hand and, with a snarl, bit the wrist. Then he ran off.

"George said nothing about it to anyone. It was just another scratch to him. He went to his hotel, poured some stuff on the wound and let it go at that.

"A short time later, inflammation set in—and George's neglect proved fatal. He died a victim of hydrophobia. It was a terrible death for so wonderful a man."

The writer drummed the edge of the sofa.

"I know you like your ironic endings," he murmured, "and I'm not going to throw you down. That dog made an attempt to bite several other people that afternoon and was finally shot by a policeman. When the ownership of the animal was checked back, the story was complete.

"The dog's name was Lightning."

Death of Mr. Dreyfuss

There Is Inspiration in the Life Story of the Pirates' Owner—Brief Comment on Local News.

Barney Dreyfuss is dead. The owner of the Pirates brought prestige to Pittsburgh again and again with pennant-winning teams, and his name became a household word. There is inspiration for every young American in the life story of this boy from Germany who, through his diligence and foresight, became rich and famous. Mr. Dreyfuss did much to increase interest in clean sport.

Forty-eight misguided persons accused of partici- pation in Communist demonstrations in the Hill District and McKeesport were found guilty in police court yesterday and fined. Unable to pay, most of them had to go to jail. Some at least of these poor wretches are to be pitied. Poverty is at the bottom of their conduct. It is too bad they cannot see they accomplish nothing by antagonizing the police.

The explosion of aluminum dust at the bronzing plant of the United States Aluminum Company at Logan's Ferry yesterday, which injured three persons, was the third that has occurred there since July, 1929, when eight workmen were killed. The situation calls, of course, for redoubled safety efforts. The recurrence of these accidents is a challenge to the management of the plant.

Heavy rains in West Virginia have brought the Monongahela River dangerously near the flood stage. Freshets such as this serve to remind us that Pittsburgh has not yet gained all the protection that it needs from flood. Twenty-five years ago both the Monongahela and the Allegheny went on a rampage and destroyed $5,250,500 worth of property here. It is estimated that if a similar flood were to occur now the damage would amount to $13,670,000.

The Flood Commission of Pittsburgh found through its investigation of the 1907 flood that protection could best be secured by the construction of a system of 17 storage reservoirs on the headwaters or tributaries of the Allegheny and Monongahela, together with certain local protection works. Construction of the reservoirs would fit into a program of Federal public works to relieve unemployment.

Father Cox is doing good work in preaching the desirability of a $5,000,000,000 federal loan to give the country needed improvements while at the same time furnishing work for the jobless and accelerating the wheels of industry. The huge crowds that greet the militant priest at every meeting bear witness to the popularity of his plea. The $5,000,000,000 loan is the plan suggested by William Randolph Hearst.

Father Cox has struck a sympathetic chord in the minds of the people by his protest against the excessive rates charged by some of the public utilities. He is right in his assertion that in view of the tax exemption enjoyed by the utilities it is their duty to keep their rates at a reasonable level. That the electric rates charged in Pittsburgh are reasonable will scarcely be contended by any impartial person who studies the facts.

A comparison of electric rates in Pittsburgh, Washington, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Philadelphia discloses Philadelphia as the only one of these cities where charges for amounts of electric power such as might be used by a small family are consistently higher than in Pittsburgh. In the other places the rates are lower than they are here, notwithstanding that Pittsburgh is favorably situated for low rates by its proximity to the coal fields.

At his meeting in the Gladstone School, Father Cox called attention rather sharply to the failure of the city government to do anything to obtain relief from oppressive public utility rates. Council can offer no satisfactory excuse for refusing to act, for the assistant city solicitor in charge of public utilities matters has publicly declared he believes the electric rates to be too high.

Protesting against the plan of Monessen theaters to give moving picture shows tomorrow for the benefit of charity, the ministerial association of that town declares the performances will be in violation of the law. They refer, of course, to the mischievous Blue Law of 1704. The sooner it is erased from the statute books the better it will be for Pennsylvania. Let every candidate for the Legislature tell how he stands on this matter.

Six well-known British distillers have filed suit against a German firm to force it to refrain from calling its product "whisky." The Britishers claim that whisky is a British product which, because of climatic conditions and its special character, cannot be made outside of Britain. What would they call Monongahela rye, and are we going to have to change the name of our famous "Whisky Insurrection"?

Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago Crime Commission, advocates the establishment of an interstate secret society to combat kidnapers. Without the most rigid secrecy, he thinks, it will be impossible to do anything. The plan appears to have merit, and it occurs that it might well be applied to combating the perpetrators of bomb outrages as well as kidnapers. The Pittsburgh police are well-nigh helpless against the bombers.

In remote places in the highlands of Pennsylvania people are to be found fully as benighted as the mountaineers of the Southern Appalachians. A criminal case in Tioga County has just brought to light, for example, a 12-year-old girl who never saw a railroad train or went to town until Thursday and has chewed tobacco since she was a baby. It is more pitiful than amusing.

With Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the interior, Henry P. Fletcher, former ambassador to Italy, and ex-Gov. John S. Fisher as the orators, the public banquet to be given in Pittsburgh on Washington's Birthday under the auspices of the Bicentennial Committee is bound to be impressive. The food for thought will be more important than the physical nourishment.

The birthday anniversary of another great Ameri- can occurs next Friday. The Sunday Sun Telegraph will commemorate Lincoln's Birthday by publishing tomorrow a splendid photograph of the Great Emancipator, fit for framing. It will be found in the Gravure Section, which will also present a page of photographs of interesting babies and numerous other attractive pictures.

A new serial starts tomorrow in the American Weekly Magazine Section of the Sun-Telegraph. It is called "This Way to Happiness" and is the story of a modern Cinderella who thought she could get along without love. The magazine will also have some interesting articles on scientific subjects written in non-technical language, among them one about the newly discovered planet Pluto.

Don't Kick Hard on Crutches -:- By Nelson Harding

Those on crutches should walk slowly
And not move with too much pep;
It is wiser for a cripple
To move with a careful step.

Don't kick at the door of trouble
Lest the portal, swinging wide,
Open suddenly and let you
Tumble awkwardly inside.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Purely personal piffle: No modern writer touches Christopher Morley for exquisite phrasing. The most gracious fellow I know is Henry Villar, Ile de France purser. Many have mistaken me for Pearson McCord, a New York tailor. And vice versa. I loathe roast lamb with mint sauce.

I look about furtively and purloin free quill toothpicks in cafes. Although I never use toothpicks. Irving Berlin has the saddest expression along Broadway. I have finished one chapter of a newspaper novel. It is called "Etaoin Shrdlu" and is a mess. I never met a dour Scotsman.

October is a favorite month. I feel more mentally alert after 6 in the evening. Letters from telegraphers are the most legible of correspondence. I'm always afraid I'll laugh hysterically at funerals. I once met a Hindu prince who smelt strongly of garlic. Antwerp is my favorite Old World city.

I cannot remember which Vanderbilt is which. Or is it who? And I'm forever confusing Helen Hayes with Ruth Gordon. I soaked two handkerchiefs at "The Champ," and was still blubbering upon reaching the sidewalk. Shadows I see at night take the shape of wolves.

The best single sentence description was by Will Rogers about Calvin Coolidge—"A close chewer and a tight spitter." A beautiful actress recently asked me to name her canary. I called it "Kitty Hawk." She changed it to "Melba." The only football game I ever saw was in St. Louis. A player's neck was broken.

Nothing annoys my wife so much as when I beat a tiddledypom with my hand on a table or chair arm. Edna Ferber is one of the three brightest conversationalists I know. No race interests me more than Chinese. I have turned down more than 100 radio and movie short offers. People who feed my dogs are never asked again.

If I were rich, I'd have a private barber shop with a barber on duty day and night. And I'd like a military band to play stirring marches while I dress. The happiest, most fortunate seven years of my life followed my breaking a full length mirror at the Ritz-Carlton.

* * *

Often I send typewritten notes to my wife in another part of the house signed "Z. Z???"—which doesn't mean a thing. Just goofy. I circled several times around a stranger in front of the old Phillips House in Dayton to muster courage to beg price of a night's lodging but couldn't. Next morning I went to work on the Herald without sleep. And six weeks later—hear the braggart—I was managing editor. I once sat through a lecture on flag-waging.

* * *

Ring Lardner and Frank Sullivan are the only writers who ever made me laugh out loud. I never began to feel elderly until recently when a stranger with a few drinks began calling me "Colonel." The funniest word to me is firkin. Somehow the name R. Fulton Cutting amuses me, too. I have not had a cold in 20 years. A favorite breakfast dish is sausage chopped up in scrambled eggs. I can drink coffee or let it alone. And drink cream by the pint.

* * *

At 16 I underwent a throat operation at the hands of a German surgeon who went violently insane a few days later and butchered his wife. I read everything I can get about kangaroos and walk in the rain rather than carry an umbrella. The only thing other men wear I never wanted was whiskers. I enjoy a jew's harp played by an expert. Winnie Sheehan gives about the most interesting dinner parties I ever attended. Lew Cody is my oldest friend among motion picture players. Restaurant drunks usually pick on me.

Zero in amusements for me is interpretative dancing. Jay Brennan is most adroit of vaudeville's straight men. I can always chuckle over that medical inspection scene where the doctor inquires of Bert Lahr: "Born?" and he replies: "What do you think?" I've been thinking of putting some sort of slick on my hair.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The "Bat Baby"—remember her? Useless question. How could you possibly forget that small, wizened face with its great tortured eyes, and the hideous story of her long imprisonment in that foul basement closet?

Not in a life time has a story so sickened a nation. Reading it, you felt murder in your heart at the thought of that father and mother. How was it possible that in a gentle city, the capital of a civilized country, such a horror should continue year after year—a baby tortured until her body and mind were a mangled smear! If only someone had known!

But, thank God, she was saved! And how her rescuers must have felt, snatching her up in a frenzy of pity and horror and haste, racing with her to safety. Yes, thank God, decent people learned of her plight at last.

You said that—didn't you?—as you read that story. But now I wonder what you'll be saying when you learn that her discovery WASN'T sudden! Her plight was NOT a secret!

FOR SEVEN YEARS — SINCE FEBRUARY, 1925—THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WELFARE IN WASHINGTON HAD RECEIVED FRANTIC REPORTS CONCERNING THE ABUSE OF THIS CHILD, AND HAD MADE INVESTIGATIONS.

Congress is now investigating these investigations. The transcript of the first report lies before me as I write, with the sworn testimony of Miss A. Patricia Morss, who had personal charge of the case. Miss Morss testifies that she made repeated calls and found "certain conditions."

The child was bruised. Seemed simple-minded. Was in an (unprintable) condition. Neighbors testified concerning the source of this condition. The child was not to be seen on many occasions, but the step-mother's excuses were accepted. Finally the case was dropped. Why? Miss Morss answers:

"THE CASE WAS CLOSED NOT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT WAS CONSIDERED UNWARRANTED, BUT BECAUSE THERE WAS INSUFFICIENT EVIDENCE, IN THE OPINION OF THE STATE, ON WHICH TO BASE ANY ACTION."

Insufficient evidence! Yet the police officer who accompanied Miss Morss on her calls reported a condition inflicted upon that little child so abominable that it is unprintable. And a witness was available who would have testified to a certain scene which would have driven any decent observer mad with fury and horror.

YET NOTHING WAS DONE! AND THE CASE WAS CLOSED, ABANDONING THAT HELPLESS LITTLE CHILD TO THE FIENDISH DEVICES OF TWO MEN AND A WOMAN.

Unbelievable! Was there no way to save her? Were the juvenile laws so strict that it was not possible to rescue her? Was there no provision made for taking her without a warrant?

There was a way to save her. The laws were not too strict. She could have been taken, without warrant, into a home provided for such cases and there held until further investigation was made.

Then was this woman who "did nothing" a monster? No. She was a conscientious worker, honest and just according to her lights.

BUT HER SPIRIT WAS SO STRANGLED WITH RED TAPE THAT IT COULD NO LONGER FUNCTION NORMALLY.

She did not see this pitiful baby as a suffering human being, foully abused, to be rescued at any cost, regardless of procedure. She saw the baby only as "A CASE STUDY" IN AN OFFICIAL FILE.

She did not hear the moans and the shrieks that rose from that basement darkness—the awful snickerings—the ape-like grunts and snarls.

SHE HEARD ONLY THE DRONE OF SOCIAL SERVICE PROCEDURE.

And today a life lies blasted beyond redemption as the fruit of her "efficiency."

God may forgive her for the sin she never meant to commit, BUT WHO WILL MAKE IT UP TO LITTLE EDITH RILEY?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Junking the Husband

With Dakota and Nevada making faces at each other, this "Land-of-the-free-and-grave-of-the-home" bids fair to blossom with a bumper crop of "deserted wives" when spring opens.

* * *

"Desertion" is the most polite ground on which you can divorce a husband. It is even more polite than "cruelty," since it implies nothing except that one of you didn't care to have the other around any more.

In some states, if a husband insists on sitting in another room, in order to concentrate on his newspaper, it constitutes "desertion." But, in others, you have to prove that he went as far as the club or the speakeasy, and wouldn't come back when you DARED him to.

* * *

"Desertion" is an india-rubber term, warranted to stretch over a multitude of sins, running all the way from a golf-complex to a blonde-complex. It comes in the usual 57 varieties, all tastily prepared and put up—by your lawyers.

* * *

There are husbands who sneak away stealthily, those who run away defiantly, and those who just go out and bang the door and never come back again.

* * *

There are those whose wives have to pack their grips, order the taxi, and make their reservations for them, before they will consent to "desert."

And those who just cheerfully turn over the Pekinese and the keys to the apartment and go off pleasantly and live at the club.

* * *

And there are those who "desert" by merely staying at home and looking after the dog and the garden, while their wives go to Reno, for the climate.

* * *

But probably the most popular and painless form of desertion is simultaneous desertion, when you help pack each other's trunks, divide the books, the shoetrees and the bridge prizes—and then go off to Paris and California, respectively, after a warm goodby and the solemn promises to postcard each other.

* * *

Everything chummy—and no misunderstanding!

* * *

"Desertion" is the modern substitution for paris green, ground-glass and shooting-irons—just as "arbitration" is the civilized substitute for war. A divorce, "by any other name," would not be half as sweet!

War Enough at Home; A Celebrated Trial

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Apropos of the war activities in China, there is a curious disposition in Europe to place upon the United States the responsibility of leadership in the protests to Japan. It is a new wrinkle in the Oriental diplomacy of England humbly to ask us what to do about Shanghai. There is every indication that our diplomacy in recent months has concentrated the resentment of Japan upon us; we are probably more hated by the Japanese now than any other nation on the globe.

Just what the administration has in mind is not entirely clear; but the American people can find nothing in the situation in China remotely to justify a war. It is announced that the sole purpose in sending troops and the Navy to China is to protect American lives and property.

The sane American knows that the sane way to protect American lives in communities where a fight is threatened or in progress is to remove the Americans to a place of safety. And there will be no popular demand by the American people that we go to war over an oil well. If property is damaged the owners of the property will be properly compensated.

Should Japan ignore the ultimatum—what?

Meanwhile Congress will be expected to keep a watchful eye on the movements of Secretary Stimson.

* * *

They Are the Victims

Now that we have legislated speedily, and with practical unanimity, for the relief of bankers, industrialists and railroads, it is to be assumed that Congress will give some thought to human beings—men, women and children, to whom relief means life.

It is just as well to put a pin in this: Not one of the "relief measures" of the administration puts a thimble full of milk in the mouth of a hungry child; not a stitch on the back of a shivering mother; not a penny in the pocket of a jobless man.

This is a nation of something more than 120,000,000 people. Of these 24,000,000 are said to be living in abject poverty—because of the lack of work. This is more than one-sixth of the population. And 12,000,000 are living on charity, and this is a tenth of the entire nation.

That really is as startling as the fall in the price of stocks.

The bankers and railroads required "relief" largely because of their blunders and, in the case of the bankers, largely because of their greed. These men, women and children who are jobless are not responsible for their plight; they are the victims.

* * *

The Two Plans Before Congress

There are two plans before Congress for the relief of these victims.

One is the measure sponsored by Senator Wagner for a prosperity loan to furnish work; and Senator La Follette has a similar measure providing for a larger loan.

The other is Senator La Follette's bill to appropriate $375,000,000 for direct relief. Whatever you may think about that do not let anyone tell you it is a "dole." It is nothing of the sort.

The federal government is merely called upon to do its part to prevent starvation. States, counties and municipalities have appropriated for the purpose and no human being has complained or denounced it as a "dole." These local community governments in many instances have exhausted their resources. Some are bankrupt. Most are in distress.

And the La Follette measure merely provides that, in the case of these communities, the federal government shall furnish the money they no longer are able to appropriate. The government at Washington gives to no individual; it does not supervise the distribution down to the individual; it merely furnishes the money for distribution through the same relief agencies that have been distributing the money hitherto appropriated by the city or county that can do no more.

To say that one is a "dole" and the other is not a "dole" is sheer dishonesty.

A Touch Of Humor

In these days of gloom we ought to be thankful for a touch of humor. We have it in the action of a Democratic judge who has brought suit for libel because someone called him a Republican. We do not realize it is as bad as that.

But this action for damages is not without precedent.

Here is a true story:

More than a century ago in Franklin County, Indiana, a man, who had been called "an old Federalist," brought suit for libel in the courts. He was represented at the trial by James Noble, the first Senator from Indiana—an exceedingly able man. He set forth in his declaration that the description of his client as a "Federalist" was a vicious and defamatory libel, because of which his client had been brought into public disgrace until his neighbors refused to have intercourse with him.

The defendant was represented by John Test, one of the first Congressmen from the state, who set forth as a defense that it was not libelous to call a man a "Federalist."

On the day of the trial the courtroom was packed. All eyes were turned with indignation on the defendant and with compassion on the plaintiff. The first witness for the latter was called to the stand.

"Do you consider it libelous to call a man a Federalist?" Noble asked.

"I do," stormed the witness.

"Which would you rather a man call you—a Federalist or a horse thief?"

"I would kill him, sir, if he called me one or the other."

"What damages do you think the defendant should pay for this libel?" asked Noble.

"A thousand dollars, at least."

* * *

A Democrat Had a Chance

A bit alarmed by the belligerancy of the witness, Test took him for the defense.

"What do you understand by a Federalist?" he asked.

"I understand a Federalist to be a Tory—an enemy of his country," bellowed the witness.

The murmurs of approval in the courtroom warned Test not to press the cross examination.

"One more question," Noble broke in. "Would you feel safe with a Federalist at your side to face the Indians in a bush fight?"

"I would not," said the witness scornfully. "I would as soon have a red man with his rifle and his tomahawk at my side."

The evidence, though meager, was sufficient as a peg on which to hang political arguments lasting until midnight; arguments on the fundamentals of government. The jury speedily brought in a verdict for the plaintiff and fixed the damages at $1,000.

And the judge, in thanking the jury for its services, warmly congratulated it on the righteousness of its verdict.

Those were the days when a Democrat had a chance.

We submit this noble legal precedent to the attorneys for the judge who is suing because he was called a Republican; he will find it in the legal lore of Indiana.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Have you lost confidence in yourself to the extent that you dare not take a step unless you are sure that it follows the footprints of others or possibly your own usual methods?

When you no longer dare to be venturesome, occasionally you have reached the limit of your usefulness.

You fear that errors might jeopardize your job.

Your boss may be so vehement in denouncing you when you do make an error that you dare not try out any new ideas you have that you think might be of benefit to the firm.

If such be the case your superior is making a mistake.

When employes reach a point where they dare not act upon their own initiative for fear of censure, their activities become very limited.

Naturally their originality is stifled and this is not a good thing for business, no matter what kind of business it is.

But it is probable that you give up thinking and acting for yourself too easily.

You are too willing to lean on some excuse to relieve yourself of responsibility.
